Does Your House Smell?

Vacation Home Opening Special! Offer Expires May 31, 2005

Healthy Clean Homes

Step #1: Investigate

Identify factors that negatively impact indoor air quality, such as dust, pollen, mold and bacteria, as well as poor ventilation.

Develop a plan to mitigate the identified problems. Green Sealed Certified products are used to clean your home and Anti-microbial treatments can be applied to give added protection.

Step #3: Ventilate

A home ventilation system can be installed to help sustain indoor air quality. The system will help bring fresh air into the home while removing damp bad air.

Before you finish your basement ...

address moisture and ventilation issues to avoid costly problems.

Whale Roast

Ten Thousand Attend Big Feast on the Beach at Southampton

By Dan Rattiner

This newspaper would like to thank everyone who participated in the big Whale Roast down at the beach in Southampton last Wednesday and Thursday. It was a one of a kind event —a whale as big as a railroad car comes ashore here once every century — and we had more fun, and from what I could see everybody had more fun than they had had in years.

The idea for the roast came up sort of spontaneously sometime on Wednesday morning. But the word spread like wildfire. 8 p.m. Wednesday night, Road B Beach. Bring your own, and whatever sort of spice you'd like to put on whale meat.

As the sun set around 7 pm, the traffic was lined up for miles along Meadow Lane, and the police, who were also invited, announced that traffic laws would be suspended for the duration, and everyone was free to park wherever they wanted to, so long as they didn't park on private property. They could park anywhere along Meadow Lane, they could shift into 4 wheel and drive out on the beach to park near the giant barbecue pit with the two tons of hot coals already glowing. (Thank you for the bulldozer, Noyack Construction, for the specially made grating, Southampton Iron and Steel, and the tons of coal Hampton Bays Coal and Firewood.) People spread blankets out just about everywhere and it was hard to walk along without crossing over one — and making a new friend.

It took almost two days for the tens of thousands of people who came to finish up the whale, and even then, there was plenty more left and practically everybody took home a dog-gie bag, or a big liquor box full of the stuff to put in the freezer. People are going to be eating well for years to come.

And what a time it was. At the east end of the beach that first night, Evelyn and the Merrymakers entertained with their popular steel band music while at the western end, the Jim Turner Trio played bluegrass and folk. People danced and sang along, threw Frisbees around, and also walked around to the beautifully decorated bridge tables, all different, set up by 93 different East End restaurants, one to a table, to demonstrate their skills

We think you should choose your mortgage the same way you choose your new house.

As one of the country's largest and best savings banks; Hudson City Savings understands that buying a new home is one of the most important investments you'll ever make. We've lent billions of dollars for mortgages in New Jersey since 1868 and know from experience it's important to shop for your financing as carefully as you do for your home.

That's why we offer a variety of mortgage and refinancing plans with the most competitive rates on Long Island.

We also provide quick approval - less than 48 hours in most cases - and unlike many banks do not "sell" our mortgages to another institution. Your relationship is with Hudson City Savings Bank for the entire term of your mortgage.

Find out why New Jersey's best savings bank is about to become one of Long Island's. Call Mortgage Advisors (South Fork) John Gaudin at (516) 443-0552 or (North Fork) Kelly Bruer at (631) 457-0966 for more details.

Lynn St. John of Bridgehampton has sold the 160 year old Bull's Head Inn in that town. He bought it nearly twenty five years ago to protect it from developers who were threatening to tear it down for a gas station and he has been a very good keeper of it. He leaves it fully repaired and restored. It has been a low key antique shop for these past twenty years. We don't know who the buyer is yet.

The faculty of Southampton College has voted not to sit on the dais along with LIU President David Steinberg at the college commencement this year. As the students get their diplomas, the faculty will be in the audience with the rest of the friends and family. No one knows who will be the commencement speaker at what is surely to be an emotional commencement, the last for the college as it closes up. But it is rumored to be Tim Bishop, the former Provost of the College who is now this district's representative in Washington in the House of Representatives.

Englishwoman Tina Brown of Bellport, the former editor of the New Yorker and Vanity Fair who now has a talk show on television, will finally become an American citizen this year. She's lived here twenty years. Her husband, Englishman Sir Harry Evans, long ago became an American citizen.

Christine Edwards, soon to be a summer intern at Dan's Papers, has won the A. C. Snow award from the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina as a sophomore. The award is given for "excellence in grammar and usage." Chrissy is on the staff of the University's daily newspaper.

TV personality and Manhattan Fitness guru Radu is setting up in Southampton for the summer. We can look forward to even more beautiful people in the Hamptons.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE IS SECURED

During the past few days, LIU has ordered the installation of manned barriers at all entrances to Southampton College. State your name and business and, if approved, you will be allowed in.

This is apparently the first step in the mothballing of the school, in anticipation of its shutting down and who knows whatever will happen after that. Vandals be warned. The barriers have gone up just in time for the commencement. A very sad and bad bit of timing.

(with chopped porpoise), Whale with corn on the cob, and perhaps the hit of the event, Coconut Vanilla Whale ice cream on a stick, courtesy of the East Hamlet Deli. It was all free. Everybody loved it. And thank you Nick and Toni's, Sam's Restaurant, Indian Cove, Turtle Crossing, Village Cheese, Bagel Biz, Hampton Bagels, Stuart's Seafood, Driver's Seat, the James Lane Cafe and all the rest — so many I can not even list them all here.

All day Thursday people enjoyed volleyball, pony rides (thanks Suffolk County Sears-Bellows), surfing, sea kayaks from Peconic Paddler, pool (thank you for the table, Century Billiards), games, puzzles and toys from Stevenson's in Southampton, kite flying, a magician (thanks to John the Magician) and just jumping off the lifeguard stand again and again (kids only). There was even a string quartet playing at the back of the dune, though where they came from I do not know.

Thursday morning singer Nancy Atlas was at the east end singing country western while Jo Carney sang ballads at the west. Also Thursday morning, the police — I could not believe how wonderfully the police handled everything — helped carry some of those who had fallen asleep from too much to drink to their cars. Of course, the police kept the car keys. It was that kind of event.

The party seemed to die down a bit on Thursday morning, but some of the party plan-

Tail soup was planned. But the Shinnecocks got it, and the fins, too. ners from the community — about a dozen helped out in one way or another —went through the crowd with bull horns urging people to call their friends, as there was still plenty of whale to be eaten. A few people drove off to get friends. Others just dialed them up on cell phones.

Few of the wealthy summer people attended this wonderful event. These were weekdays, after all, and they were busy in the city making money. Also, I didn't see any of the celebrities, no Paris Hilton or Alec Baldwin or Christie Brinkley, but just about every local politician was there, including numerous town supervisors and councilmen, about a dozen mayors and contingents from more than a dozen police departments and fire departments in the area.

One of the big highlights of the event was the arrival of President Bush, who came in on a small plane and landed right there on the beach Thursday around noon. He got out with his wife, Laura, the First Lady, and he climbed down in the flying suit he made famous last year and he waved to everybody. The Hampton Cove High School Marching Band played "Hail to the Chief," and Martha Ashley, the senior valedictorian of Hampton Country School, who says she is looking forward to a career in the Foreign Service, made a welcoming speech.

"This is wonderful," Mr. Bush said. "I want every one of you folks to come down to Crawford the next time I have a barbecue. Make a note of that would you? We'll send 'em all an invitation."

Bush eagerly joined in the festivities, dancing up a storm, and was soon joined by his brother Jeb, who flew up from Miami to Gabreski Airport in Westhampton in Air Force 4. Also, Condoleezza Rice, the Secretary of State, came in from Andorra, the little country between France and Spain where she had just concluded meetings with the Grand Duke of Andorra. Condoleezza dances a mean Macarena.

By Thursday evening, people who are often at odds with one another, perhaps under the influence of alcohol, seemed to bond together. Andy Sabin, the local environmentalist, was seen dancing with Bill Esseks, a local lawyer who frequently represents developers.

Beach For Sale

Clark's Beach, a Public Beach on the Sound, May Go on the Block

By Dan Rattiner

Want to buy the Brooklyn Bridge? The idea is not as far-fetched as it once was. There has been talk about selling the Pennsylvania Turnpike to private individuals, and here in New York State there is a move afoot in Albany to sell the Tappan Zee Bridge, which, in public hands, has never made any money. Now a town here on eastern Long Island is considering selling a beach. The village is Greenport on the North Fork, and the beach is Clark's Beach, which has 1000 feet of frontage on Long Island Sound.

Selling a beach anywhere on eastern Long Island would seem an absolutely outrageous idea. It's part of a community's heritage. And if a community cannot find a use for it in this generation surely there will be a use found for it in a future generation.

In this particular case, however, there is a kind of method to the madness. The beach is largely strewn with boulders and rocks, and is just adjacent to the Inlet Point County Park. You walk through the Park, and out to the County Beach and then seamlessly onto Clark's Beach. Clark's Beach is totally undeveloped.

According to the Mayor of Greenport, Stewart Kapell, the ultimate goal is to sell the beach to the County, which will result in a larger park. The County has said they would be amenable. But to do this, Greenport has to first offer the property up for sale — it is zoned two-acre residential and could result in seven waterfront homes if sold — and by doing this, be able to present the County a price to beat of about $15 million for the purchase, given that, in today's market, individual lots might sell for three quarters of a million each. The County could justify paying this price in order to protect the Park. And thus it would stay undeveloped.

Why do this? Money. Greenport is a very small village of about 2,500 people and its annual Village budget is only about $4 million. However, in the last five years, Greenport has embarked on a huge urban renewal project

RENT TED AMMON'S MANSION FOR $295,000

By Dan Rattiner

You knew this was going to happen. The house in East Hampton where Ted Ammon was murdered three years ago is up for rent for the summer. It's yours for $295,000 from Memorial Day to Labor Day, an amount that seems about right for a house of this size in this overheated real estate market.

If you take it on, you'll get a 25-room mansion in the English cottage style on two manicured Middle Lane acres in the estate section of East Hampton, just a short walk or bicycle ride from Two Mile Hollow Beach.

Here are the specifics. It's got a swimming pool, a tennis court, six bedrooms with six and a half baths, a guest wing and a children's wing with servant's quarters, a formal dining room, a study, an office, a chef's eat-in kitchen, a living room with a fireplace and a slate patio off the dining room accessible by French doors. It comes fully furnished with antiques and fine art. There's also a two and a half car garage, an alarm system and a video surveillance system, neither of which were in operation when electrician Danny Pelosi, who had installed them and who was having an affair with Mrs. Ammon, bludgeoned to death Mr. Ammon in the master bedroom on Saturday night, October 22, 2001.

For your rental, the alarm system has been turned back on, but the surveillance system has not. There is also, I am told, a safe room, a hidden place you can enter through the back of a closet where it would be safe to go at such time that burglars might be heard downtown, creating a stunning waterfront park, restoring Main Street and the sidewalk on Front Street at a cost of tens of millions of dollars. To do this, it bonded the project for thirty years, a big burden for such a small village. An influx of $15 million from a County with a $1 billion budget would be a drop in the bucket for the County but for the Village would result in their being able to both retire some of the long term bonds while keeping the village's tax rate stable. The sale of Clark's Beach, which Still, the idea of the sale goes against the grain. Is there a downside to this sale? There is. Greenport loses the ability at that particular place on Long Island Sound to be in direct control of beachfront for the citizens of the Village. Today there is the place for the County, which would include Greenporters, and there is Clark's. In the future, there would be no exclusivity for Village residents there. Should Greenport ever become a beach town attracting people from all over the County — something which at this juncture would appear to be very unlikely, but then, you never know —Greenporters would have to mingle on the Inlet beach with the great unwashed.

As for the sale of the Pennsylvania Turnpike or the Tappan Zee, I presume our government officials would put in safeguards to see to it that these facilities continue to operate at reasonable prices — with a buy back if they do not. I might note, there already IS a privately owned highway that goes out to Reston, Virginia. And it is doing very well, thank you. I've been on it.

As for the Brooklyn Bridge, well, that's another matter.

Pyramids

Piling Food, Getting Fat, Drinking Wine, But Nothing About Egypt

By Dan Rattiner

There were four big developments in the eatright-live-longer industry last week. The first was the publication of the book THE FRENCH DIET: THE SECRETS OF WHY FRENCH WOMEN DON'T GET FAT. The second was a study that showed having a glass of wine a day does not make you live longer. The third was a study that showed fat people live longer than thin people. And the last was the unveiling of the new food pyramid, replacing the old food pyramid which experts say never did anybody any good.

I will start with the most shocking of these four developments, the study that shows fat people live longer than thin people. One wonders why do we need a food pyramid?

The study was conducted by the highly respected National Cancer Institute and Center for Disease Control, took years to complete and was the largest study of its kind ever undertaken. What it found was this. The worst mortality rates are for people who are extremely obese. The next worst mortality rates are for people who are either obese or underweight. And then the surprise. The best mortality rates are for people who are overweight (between normal and obese). People who are of normal weight finished second to overweight.

The study uses the government's own definitions to describe these levels of over or underweight. It involves a calculation of an individual's body mass, the fat index, which is done by taking your weight in pounds, dividing it by your height in inches squared and multiplying the result by 703. For example, if you are 5 foot

It is totally incomprehensible, a sort of rainbow affair that gets pinched on the top to a point.

8 inches, thin would be 122 pounds or less, normal would be 123 to 164, overweight would be 165 to 196, obese would be 197 to 229 and extremely obese would be 230 and up. Overweight looks Reubenesque. But it's the winner. Incidentally, overweight people live a life dramatically longer, while extremely obese people live a life that is dramatically shorter.

Some experts expressed disbelief at these findings, given America's obsession with being thin. But the findings are accurate, and are published this month in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Which leads us to the food pyramid, which, if the above is true, should be turned upside down and stuck in the ground on its point.

The old food pyramid was created in 1992, and put breads and cereals down at the broad base, with fats up at the tiny top and milk, meat, vegetables and fruit in between. Personally, the only thing that I noticed in 1992 that I thought might be related to the pyramid was food piling in restaurants. It was a terrible thing. Before 1992, food in restaurants was presented to you the way it was supposed to be, on plates all separated out. If you wanted to pile it up, it was up to you but if you were under 12 your mother usually told you to stop playing with your food. After 1992, food piling became the fad. And I started to eat more frequently in pizzerias.

They still continue to pile food in many restaurants — mashed potatoes on the bottom, fruits, vegetables, meats and milk products in the middle, and fat on the top just like with the food pyramid — and I still go to pizzerias.

The new food pyramid, after five years of study by a committee, looks exactly like something that had spent five years being studied by a committee. It is totally incomprehensible, a sort of rainbow affair that gets pinched on the top to a point. And then there's a flight of stairs going up the side with a very thin person hurrying up the stairs, presumably to gobble the fat, which was up top of the old pyramid. Boy, will he be disappointed. I publish a picture of the new food pyramid along with the old. The new pyramid appears to suggest you should eat while lying down.

You figure it out.

Now comes the report, contrary to what we have been told up until now, which says a glass of wine a day is no better than not having a glass of wine a day. This is a reputable report, as reputable as the one from the National Cancer Institute, but in this case, it is not true. It's wrong. A glass of wine a day, particularly a red wine and particularly a Long Island wine, is good for you. Trust me on this. It's bracing, gets the blood flowing, makes you feel a whole lot better than you did before. And out the door you go skipping along.

What have we learned from all of this? Two things. One is that no matter what, someday, something is gonna getcha. And the second thing is if somebody comes up with a book titled HOW ITAL-IAN WOMEN STAY GLOWINGLY OVER-WEIGHT, they will make a fortune. As for me, I'm rushing up to McDonald's for a Big Mac, some fries and a Coke, supersized.

Wait a minute. You know what I think about fat people living longer? Well, they do. And it's because they know they are overweight and they hang back. It's the thin people who bungee jump, who rock climb, who rob banks, who fight battles — just look at any Bruce Willis movie or Terminator movie. Hundreds of thin people die in these movies, while the overweight people are more cautious. They do the planning. They stay behind the lines out of harms way and live to fight another day. I wonder if any of this was factored into this new study.

It is interesting to speculate how it was decided that the proper price might be $295,000. It is a major property, to be sure. There are perhaps two hundred homes in this top-of-the-line category; the highest price for one particular one on the ocean for rent this summer is nearly a million dollars.

As for this one, on the upside, there is the sensation value of the property, which probably would make it more valuable. There is also, on the downside, the sensation value of the property as a star-crossed residence, which probably makes it less valuable. So you wind up back where you started as far as price goes. (And there is no x marks the spot on the floor by the bed in the master bedroom.)

The house was willed to the two children of Ted and Generosa Ammon, with a lifetime provision to the nanny, Kaye Mayne, 60, to live there for the rest of her life. The two children were 12 when their father died. A year later, Generosa Ammon, after marrying the electrician, died of breast cancer. The electrician is now in jail.

Since Mrs. Ammon-Pelosi's passing, the children have been taken in custody by Mr. Ammon's sister Sandi Williams, who lives in Alabama. The children's interest, it would seem, is to be far away from this tragedy. Kaye Mayne, on the other hand, actually volunteered to vacate the home for the summer and put it up for rent, with the proceeds going to the children. The upkeep of the house reportedly equals about what the rental will bring. She will return in the fall.

Mr. Ammon's fortune, originally valued at between $60 and $80 million, was left to Mrs. Ammon, and after her death to the children. At the present time what remains of the fortune ($35 million after the lawyers got at it), is being held in trust for the children, who will receive about half of it when they reach the age of 18, more of it at 30 and the final amount at 40.

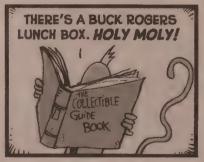

The house is being marketed as a rental by the East Hampton office of the Corcoran Group. Walk-throughs have taken place and considerable interest has already been shown. It is expected to rent shortly.

Surfing Manhattan

You Close the Bar in Soho at 4 AM and Head Out for Montauk

By Avery Andon

New York City is the last place that comes to mind when thinking of surfing. That's why it caught me off guard when the twenty-year-old upcoming shredder Trip Patterson asked me to meet him at a bar in downtown Manhattan. The group did not resemble your run-of-the-mill surfers.

They looked more like jet setters than wave riders, with their trendy t-shirts and net hats emblazoned with graffiti. I met them outside a club called Marquees, where Trip shook hands with several bouncers who proceeded to usher our group past the long line that had accumulated behind the cordoned off front door. Making a V.I.P entrance into a hot club was not what I had in mind when scheduling an interview with the newfound surfing sensation, but it certainly didn't bother me.

Once inside, a scantily clad hostess escorted us into a dimly lit limited access room where we took seats. Moments later a bottle of Grey Goose was brought out, followed by a bucket of ice filled with Red Bulls. Trip told me to have a good time, and assured me I'd get to see him surf before the night was over. Unless he was going to jump in the Hudson River with a long board and surf boat wake, I didn't see how he planned on catching waves any time soon.

The hours passed quickly as we downed Red Bull and vodkas, sharing stories of big waves and beautiful babes. At one point the whole idea of surfing was lost as a group of attractive girls visiting from L.A. sat with us, and asked if we had late night plans. Against our better judgment we answered "Yes."

Around four in the morning Trip decided it was time to go. We all grabbed our jackets and walked out to the street. Intoxicated couples swaggered along the sidewalk as no-name club promoters forced fliers into the hands of people who had already reached their quota of drinks that night.

One of the guys with us, named Ashley Koral, had parked his white Tahoe a few blocks away and in no time we were eastbound on the Long Island Expressway heading for Montauk or

TWO DIE IN STUN GUN INCIDENTS HERE

By Dan Rattiner

The parents of a mentally ill Southampton man, who had done nothing wrong but who died two blocks from his home after being subdued by police for acting crazy, have just filed a lawsuit about the way he died. They are charging that he died from the use of excessive force by the Southampton Village Police, who had been called in, that the Suffolk Medical Examiner's office covered it up, and that the company that manufactures the Taser gun, which is advertised as safe, are also responsible. They are seeking $550 million from the Village in a Civil Rights lawsuit, and $570 million from Taser of Scottsdale, Arizona. And they are charging that Suffolk Medical Examiner Charles Wetli, whose office ruled their son had died a "natural" death caused by his illness, should be the subject of an investigation. Mr. Wetli makes a living by testifying across the country involving deaths in police custody, each time claiming the people "scared themselves to death," an attorney for the parents claims.

David Glowczenski was 35 when he died. Seriously ill with schizophrenia, his parents on several prior occasions had called police to come and restrain him during episodes, as he behaved irrationally out in the street and shouting about the voices he was hearing in his head. He was a big man, heavyset and bearded, who weighed over 200 pounds.

This past February 4 was such an occasion. Glowczenski had left the house, hearing voices, and saying he was going to visit a nearby church, but neighbors heard him on North Main Street, two blocks away, clearly over the edge. The parents were called and they again called the police.

Two police cars arrived with four officers, but this time, when Glowczenski was approached by a female police officer, he shoved her away. When it was over, Glowczenski lay dead. He had been hit nine times with 450,000 volts of electricity from stun guns, had been shot with pepper spray, thrown down and handcuffed, apparently by an officer leaning so hard on his back it fractured his ribs. He was badly beaten also, as attested by bruises found all over his body, in addition to the stun gun marks. His testicles were also ruptured.

All of this information was revealed this past week when a forensic pathologist from upstate New York was hired by the parents to do a second autopsy. Much of it did not appear in the County Medical Officer's earlier autopsy.

It seems obvious that Glowczenski was agitated, incoherent and in great distress shortly before his death. How much of a danger to others he was at the time is unclear. Wetli's ruling of "natural" death reads "[he died of an] acute exhaustive mania due to schizophrenia."

These are serious charges brought by a family in town. They should and will be taken very seriously. Whatever happened to the use of grappling nets in situations such as this?

As we go to press, we have learned of another mentally ill man on eastern Long Island who died after being stunned with Taser shots while struggling with police. John Cox of Rocky Point, who was 39, was visiting his girl friend, Georgia

Harris, 41, at her home in Bellport last Saturday to watch a movie on television. They each had two beers, at which point Cox became agitated and began yelling and banging on the walls. He suffers from bipolar disorder, a disease similar to schizophrenia, and has had bouts similar to this before. Harris and her mother, who owns the house, could not control Cox, and so, as they had done before, they called the County police who were familiar with his condition. Officers arrived and they used the Taser on him a total of five times. Cox was five foot nine and 240 pounds. The Taser bolts seemed to have no effect, the officers later said.

According to police, it took nine officers to subdue Cox, and during the struggle, he injured them all. After that, he died. With the incident thus at an end, all of the police officers went to a nearby hospital for treatment of their injuries, though doctors found none injured seriously enough to require admission. The Suffolk police department subsequently issued a statement that said "proper department procedures" were

A reporter for Newsday, interviewing neighbors on Sunday, was told by some that they had gone outside and could hear the police inside beating Cox. Police say that officers never struck Cox, and they also say that according to the Suffolk medical examiner's office, Cox had alcohol and cocaine in his blood at the time of his death, although it could not be determined when the cocaine had been ingested.

One witness told the Newsday reporter that she had been a childhood friend of Cox and that when her mother Thelma had to have her legs amputated because of worsening diabetes, Cox carried her to the hospital and then painted the room back at her house to make it nice for her when she was able to come home.

"They didn't have to kill him like that," Cox's girlfriend said.

"The End," as they like to call it. In addition to several surfboards stacked in the trunk there were wetsuits, booties, gloves and towels strewn all over the back seat barely leaving enough room for Ashley's brother Spencer and me to

By the time we rolled into Montauk it was six, but Trip and the gang were wide awake and in good spirits, rocking out to "The Sex Album" by Jessica Vale. After quickly stopping for bagels and coffee we drove to one of Trip's secret spots he calls the "Stash," because it is stashed away from public access.

It required trespassing, parking illegally, and scaling a steep dune to get there, none of which I recommend or condone. However, the waves were considerably larger and cleaner than any other break I've seen in Montauk and Trip took full advantage.

He commandeered the waves with an amazing presence, getting in tubes that looked impossible to penetrate and landing sharp cutbacks. Trip pulled off some incredible airs, sky rocketing off the end of each wave and back flipping into the water.

The group of rock-star style surfers had a three-hour session before fatigue hit. None of us had slept, and I felt like hell. The alcohol was still in our blood and sleep deprivation came crashing down like a ton of bricks. Praising the water gods for providing a great morning of surfing, we all headed back to Spencer and Ashley's house to get some much needed sleep.

Marla

Friends World LIU Student Based at Southampton is Killed in Iraq

By Kelly Krieger

When a young person leaves this earth before his or her time, it seems unfair. Their youthfulness, ambition and dreams for a full life ahead suddenly come to an end. On April 16th, this was the unfortunate fate of Marla Ruzicka, former Friends World Program student, and founder of CIVIC Worldwide (The Campaign for Innocent Victims In Conflict). Marla Ruzicka and her colleague, Faiz Ali Salim, Civics' Iraq Country Director, were tragically killed by a car bomb on Baghdad Airport Road while on their way to visit an injured Iraqichild.

Marla lived each day knowing and witnessing the danger and tragedy of war. In fact, it was for this very reason that she determined to devote her life to making the best of terrible circumstances. She believed from an early age that it was her obligation to help those who couldn't help themselves. And it was that belief that continued to be nurtured through her education and into her career.

Marla was originally from California, but found herself drawn to the East Coast to continue her education in the Friends World LIU Program from 1995-1999. The Friends World Program, a degree granting program of LIU, had been founded in 1965 in New York by a group of Quakers committed to providing an alternative educational path for students interested in world issues.

In 1991 this program became part of LIU, located on the Southampton College campus. The program is comprised of a separate faculty, staff, curriculum and graduation requirements. In the program, students are exposed to a different kind of learning – experimental learning. They each have the opportunity to live in two other cultures in different regions of the world during the four-year program. Locations currently include centers in China, Costa Rica, England, India, Japan, Thailand and the Mediterranean Region and the United States. The program provides a first hand look into the diversity, problems and obstacles that often stand in the way and result in conflict and war among the world's many religions and cultures.

"We should never forget the victims of violent terrorism," she said. And Marla began to work to bring about change.

After completing this program, students often make a life-long commitment to making the world a better place. They gain the knowledge to use resources and lobby their causes to their government, as Marla did.

Marla will forever be a role model for many that follow in her footsteps.

"Marla overflowed with passion and had an incredible sense of obligation to help those less fortunate," said Campaign Manager for CIVIC April Pederson in her letter to friends of Marla on their website. Marla's mission will live on through this organization she founded.

When she formed CIVIC two years ago, Marla began visiting each home where Iraqi victims lived, and also connected with soldiers and numerous journalists in search of information that would provide the number and names of civilians killed or injured. The U.S. Military claimed that they did not record such information. Marla was the first to set forth a survey that would collect valuable statistics regarding the loss of civilians. Her message that every victim matters was loudly heard in Washington many times.

"We should never forget the victims of violent terrorism," she said. And Marla began to work closely with our government to bring about change.

Marla made a huge impact in Washington when Senator Patrick Leahy rallied behind her efforts and became the first to sponsor the legislation to provide U.S. aid to victims of war. One of her biggest accomplishments was realized when $22 million dollars in aid was granted for much needed medical relief, shelter and food to the increasing number of victims and their families

Imagine a world where every single person can make a difference. Although ignorance can allow us to get caught up in our own lives, it's people like Marla Ruzicka, educational programs like Friends World and organizations like CIVIC that give us the power to get involved and make change possible.

We owe it to our future generations never to lose sight of understanding and respecting the diverse backgrounds and cultures in our world.

Thank you, Marla for taking many of us to a place in our hearts and our minds where we can gain some clarity and make a difference.

Marla's conviction for helping the innocent victims of war in Afghanistan and Iraq will be her legacy. This 28-year-old displayed bravery and evoked a beautiful spirit that is undeniable. Her loss is felt worldwide, but her mission and commitment to this cause will live on through her organization and her angelic spirit.

"To have a job where you can make things better for people? That's a blessing. Why would I want to do anything else?" said Marla Ruzicka.

Shipwrecks

Breakup of a Scallop Boat on Southampton Beach is One of Many

By Christian McLean

Spotted around Long Island are thousands of shipwrecks. Some are known and marked on maps, others rest on the flat sandy bottom of the ocean, only to be explored by the multitude of fish that call them home. The East End has been built on the backs of brave seafaring men who have risked everything on the open ocean. In the 1800s whaling made Sag Harbor a thriving international port and in more modern times, Montauk and Hampton Bays have become main harbors for Long Island's fishing industry. And although technology has changed drastically over the past 200 years, switching from sails to steam to diesel, and trading in wood for fiberglass, the ocean poses just as large a danger as it did all those years ago when men and women watched the grandest ships of their time sink to the greatest depths of the sea. They have heard the cry of sailors on cargo vessels that have run aground on stormy, fog-ridden nights, and most recently, we have seen a family's livelihood dashed upon the shores of Southampton with no hope of salvation.

On Saturday, April 23rd an audience of 20 gathered in the back room of the Quogue Library. Mike Salvarezza and Chris Weaver of Eco-Photo Explorers presented "Long Island Shipwrecks," a multimedia journey into the recent history of shipwrecks in the waters surrounding Long Island. From WWII German U-

Boats to steam cruisers, the ocean is littered with sunken vessels. Although some, like U-853, were sunk in wartime, the majority of the wrecks around Long Island have been due to mechanical failure, human error, and weather. Many of the wrecks were west of the Hamptons, but Mike and Chris did provide a few examples of wrecks that occurred off the coast of Quogue. They stated that because of the barrier beaches and the ever changing sandbars, ships in the days prior to GPS and depth finders were constantly running aground.

Around midnight, on January 22, 1904, a mile west of the Quogue rescue station, The Augustus Hunt, a four-masted schooner from Norfolk, Virginia, carrying 1750 tons of coal, ran aground. The fog was so thick and the weather so dreadful that rescue boats could not find the schooner. Even when the ship was located, the weather prevented the rescue boats from reaching it, and slowly the boat was taken apart by the sea, leaving only two members of the crew to survive. A second vessel, the Naham Chapin, suffered a similar fate in 1897 just east of Quogue. The crew was clinging to the wreckage, but because of the fierce weather, the rescue boats, again, could not reach the ship and everyone, including the captain's wife and daughter died. The anchor of the Naham Chapin now sits in front of the Quogue Library as a reminder of the power of

The talk on shipwrecks on the beaches of the East End seemed almost fitting in the wake of what had happened just six days earlier.

The Champion, a 50-foot dragger out of Hampton Bays, was returning from a night of scallop fishing. At the helm of the ship was Kenneth Jayne, the brother of Gregg Jayne (the vessel's owner). A seasoned captain, who comes from a long line of fishermen, Kenneth noticed something was wrong with the rudder as they approached the mouth of the Shinnecock Inlet. The rudder was not steering the boat as it should.

The ship ran aground somewhere around 1 a.m.- 500 feet east of the inlet. Kenny and his crewman were able get off the boat, with minor injuries. Kenny had broken his thumb and both men were shaken up.

Clearly, it seemed running aground on a sandy Southampton beach was much safer than risking the entry to the stone-jettied inlet, but now that the ship was on the beach a new problem arose: getting it off. Seth Allen of Chesterfield Associates was called around 1:30 a.m. He was down on the beach in no time surveying the situation. Lester Trafford of Sea Tow, a seafaring towing service based in Hampton Bays, was also awakened in the middle of the night and got to the scene a little afterwards.

It was a dangerous situation, to say the least. The ship, filled with scallops, had been pounded by 7 to 10 foot waves for about an hour already, and it seemed like the ocean wasn't about to give up. The Champion had taken on water and sand and would need to be pumped dry before anything else could be done. They quickly got to work on the pumping. In the meantime Mr. Allen had three excavators hauled onto the beach to help right the ship once it was emptied.

By sunrise it was obvious what had caused the Champion to run aground. A loose line that had been drifting in the ocean had tangled itself around the rudder, making it impossible to navigate. The relentless waves weren't helping the situation and as the machines slowly lifted the vessel off its port side, lines were tied to Sea Tow's 40-foot ship. The towing ship headed through the surfline into what they thought were stable and settled waters. The excavators held the ship up until all the lines went taut, but when they let their support go, the Champion wouldn't budge. The Sea Tow vessel pulled, engines churning, then suddenly a set of rough waves broke over the bow. The ship was able to ride over the first wave, but the second hit dead on and the force of the water blew threw the front windows and poured right through to the stern. The men were all right and the vessel's engines were fine; otherwise there might have been two ships on the beach.

NURSERIES INC.

Finishing up.

The men from Sea Tow and Chesterfield Associates worked feverishly past sundown trying to pry the Champion free. At one point, one of Sea Tow's divers became caught in an ocean depression, just feet from dry land. A line had also wrapped around his neck and he struggled to break free. Help came from the shore, where another man ran, fully clothed, into the waves and pulled him to safety.

By the next morning, after over 30 hours of pounding by the ocean, the Champion was declared a wreck. With the stress and damage caused by the waves, Gregg Jayne said that he wouldn't feel confident sending his brother back out in that ship, even if it was fixed. And so the salvage began. The engine, the fishing gear, and whatever else could be saved was stripped from the ship before the three excavators, that just the day, before had tried to break the Champion free, began to tear it apart. It was chewed to pieces by the machinery and the entire ship was placed into two 30-yard dumpsters and hauled off. The salvaged pieces are now stored in the Chesterfield Associates yard, where for years Gregg Jayne had stored his lobster pots in the off season. When on the phone with Douglas Jayne, Kenny and Gregg's father, he simply said in a broken voice, "I'm just so sick over the whole thing."

Like so many before it, the Champion will be entered into the log books as just another wreck that occurred on the Hamptons' coastline, but for the Jayne family, whose livelihood was invested in their ship, the journey continues. Their summer business has been lost and, although insurance will cover the physical damage, the emotional loss will remain long after the tides of the Atlantic recede.

The party ended around three o'clock Friday morning, and as the Town Trustees buried the remaining carcass in the sand on the land they own down there at Road B, the police led the exhausted crowd of about five hundred remaining partygoers in a weaving, cheering conga line toward the parked cars out on the street as each of the ten bands that performed that night played, in unison, "Auld Lang Syne."

Theater director, artist, designer and Water Mill resident Robert Wilson received a Pratt Legend Award last Wednesday from the Pratt Institute at a black tie gala at Gotham Hall in Manhattan. Mr. Wilson was unfortunately hospitalized in Berlin at the time and could not attend. We congratulate Robert on his award and wish him a speedy recovery.

Portraiture is one of the most memorable and beloved genres in all the arts. This Memorial Day Weekend in East Hampton as select group will be offered a rare opportunity to have their portraits done by a well-known contemporary artist - all to benefit a major charity. The 17th Annual Planned Parenthood Hudson Peconic Inc. (PPHP) Benefit on Saturday, May 28th, 2005, from 5:30 to 7:30pm, will include a portrait auction, Portraits for Choice. Landscape designer Edwina von Gal will co-host the PPHP fundraiser at her East Hampton home with designer Isaac Mizrahi. Honorary chairpersons of the event will include Alec Bladwin, Peter Boyle, Christie Brinkley, Sarah Jessica Parker and Vera Wang. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres by Nick and Toni's will be served. Past hosts of this event have included April Gornik and Eric Fischl, Dorothy Lichtenstein, Ross Bleckner, Martha Stewart, Ina and Jeffery Garten, Susan Ringo and Barry Sonnenfeld, Bryan Hunt and Larry Gagosian.

The Sheltered Islander by sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #346 Age is Just a Number

One of my best buddies just turned 50 and she was having a terrible time with it. So I thought I'd cheer her up by telling her not to think of her body as 50, but just think of her boobs as 25 years old apiece. It didn't have the elevating effect I had hoped. As she cracked the seal on the bottle of Amaretto, I thought I'd point out some other advantages of age. I might need these pointers myself someday, very far in the future, of course.....

As a mature woman:

* You have the ability to talk to authority figures without having to picture them naked in order to avoid feeling intimidated.

* You know if you date or marry someone 20 years younger, you look like a fool.

* You can fully assess a person by looking at their shoes.

* You can talk, in their presence, about how moronic men are, because you know they aren't listening, anyway.

* The risk of being kidnapped goes down 50% more with each additional year of age.

* People no longer view you as a hypochondriac.

* Male doctors no longer want you to undress completely, just uncover whatever it is they absolutely have to look at.

* Pharmacists treat you so much nicer now that you are a source of increasing revenue.

* Your secrets are safe with your friends because they can't remember them either.

* No one expects you to run into a burning building to save anything.

* You, can command family members from a recliner.

* There's not much left to learn the hard way.

* Your joints are more accurate than The Weather Channel.

* In a hostage situation you'll probably get released in the first group.

* You know that beauty is only a light switch away.

* You know if it has tires or testicles, you're going to have trouble with it.

* Cooking with wine doesn't mean it goes in the food.

* You've been the peacemaker long enough; from now on, whatever hits the fan will be evenly distributed.

* One of the advantages and disadvantages of menopause is that your photographic memory is running out of film, allowing you to forget what you got arrested for in 1968.

* The picture of you dancing topless in Central Park in 1969 with your boobs painted like daisies used be to hidden in a drawer. Now it's on the mantle just to remind you that inside that mature body is a radiant seventeen-year-old girl who still knows all the words to "Mellow Yellow."

* You've learned not to leave the store without the pants that match the jacket.

* Your Driver's License picture is starting to look good.

* You know that bills travel through the mail at twice the speed of checks.

* You can live with the fact that some days are a total waste of make-up.

* The broadness of your mind and narrowness of your waist have changed places.

* You're just one more back injury away from qualifying for that handicapped parking permit.

* Now, losing a pet is like losing a child. But losing a man is like losing a pet used to be. You know you can always pick up another if you really want to go through all that training again....

* Screw Women's Lib, you have to take a rough looking man with you for any conversations with car repairmen or the repair costs will go up 25%.

* You know if a man starts a conversation with, "I never wanted to hurt you...." he can just stop there because you know it's shorthand for, "I want to be with this other woman but I don't want you to cry and make me feel guilty for being a schmuck." But at this age, even if you cry him a river, you know you CAN build a bridge and get the f—- over this s.o.b.

* You're ready for a woman president because you know when women get stressed we shop, we don't invade other countries.

EAST END CONVIVIUM OF SLOW FOOD BENEFIT AT ATLANTICA Dan's North Fork Goes To... WESTHAMPTON BEACH, APRIL 21

During these days of busy schedules and fast food fixes, Slow Food USA is an initiative whose time has come. This international movement was started to keep alive regional cuisines and local producers and currently counts nearly 100,000 members worldwide. Our local chapter, East End Convivium of Slow Food, includes vegetable, grape, poultry and oyster farmers, bread bakers, potato chip makers, fishermen, beekeepers, mushroom hunters, farmstand growers and goers – and all of us who love good cooking.

Last Thursday, April 21, party-goers came out for the Slow Food Cocktail Party to benefit "Jr Slow Food" at Tierra Mar at Atlantica in Westhampton Beach. The event helped raise funds for a new "Jr. Slow Food" curriculum, which will include a 10-session afterschool program for local 5th and 6th graders. The first program, which will begin this September at Ecco Farm, East Hampton (with Cornell Cooperative Extension marine youth educators), will teach children about good nutrition and how easy it is to maintain.

guests milled among tables of raffle items including sculpture, chardonnay samplers, honey baskets, opera tickets and several dozen gift certificates all donated to promote the idea of eating local, regional, seasonal foods. Master of ceremonies Brian Halweil presided over many events, including a honey bee demonstration with beekeeper Mary Woltz, a "seashore safari" with sea stars and other amazing local marine life with Stacy Myers (Cornell Marine Youth Educator), a cheese tasting with Mike Cavianola of Cavianola's Cheese Shop in Sag Harbor, a taste of specialty and Asian greens with Karen Lee of Sang Lee Farms in Southold, and a lesson on aquaculture with Karen Rivara of Aeros Oyster Company of Southold. A Long Island wine tasting was also sponsored by Slow Food members Castello di Borghese, Channing Daughters, Comtesse Therese, The Lenz Winery, Macari Vineyards, Paumanok Vineyards, Sherwood House, and Wolffer Estate Vineyards.

According to the event coordinators Katherine Plumb and Mary Foster Morgan, the goal was to raise three thousand dollars.

OVER THE BARREL...

New Wines From Old Vines at Vineyard 48 Route 48 on the North Fork is home to some of our regions best wineries Now, it shares a name with one of the newest. A year ago, Italian-born Rose Pipia purchased the former Bidwell Winery in Cutchogue, Long Island's second oldest vineyard, and has renamed it Vineyard 48.

I never liked Bidwell's wines much, so this is Pipia and her son, Joseph Pipia, the winery's general manager, are obviously dedicated to turning the winery around, having hired some Long Island wine heavyweights to help exorcise the demons of bad Bidwell wines past Steve Mudd of Mudd Vineyards has been brought in to get the vineyard healthy while Roman Roth of Wilffer Estate is serving as technical consultant to winemaker Mathew Berenz, formerly of Pindar Vineyards.

Mr. Pipia, true to his family's Old World roots, takes a very hands-on approach, taking part in planting, pruning, spraying and harvesting in the vineyard. In the cellar, where new barrels and equipment have been installed, he's been working side-by-side with Roth and Berenz.

The six wines set for release at this Saturday's grand opening, the first under the Vineyard 48 label, are actually old Bidwell stock that has been "tweaked" for release. As you'll read, I found them to be a bit hit and miss.

The Vineyard 48 White ($10) is a non-vintage blend of Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc that is a little weak in the nose but offers some sweet vanilla and subtle buttery flavors on the palate It was wanting a bit in the fruit department, how-

Vineyard 48's 2002 Riesling ($15) is an extremely aromatic white with a floral, almost perfume-like nose and concentrated peach and apricot flavors. Lush and fruity, a bit more acidity would really elevate this wine into something unique and special. With a focus on this varietal and the winery's old vines, I expect great things

PHIL VARCA AND ANDY ALEDORT ROCK THE VAIL-LEAVITT IN RIVERHEAD Dan's North Fork Goes To ... SATURDAY, APRIL 23

The Long Island Blues Society presented a fabulous show at the Vail-Leavitt Theater in Riverhead on Saturday, April 23, featuring the rockin' music of Phil Varca and the SlamJammers and Andy Aledort and the Groove Kings, who played new music such as, "Do You Have A Sister?" and "Can It

Be" as well as some favorites including a great rendition of BB King's "Ain't That Like a Woman." Following was Phil Varca, who thrilled the audience as usual when he came down the stairs into the audience and played his guitar, jumping and spinning about. The band played an excellent rendition of Dr. John's "Right Place/Wrong Time". And just when you thought the night was coming to a close Phil brought up Andy Aledort for a jam session, singing "Have You Ever Loved a Woman" and "Down By The River Post". But the night still didn't end there. Phil invited up two young talented guitarists, JP Blues and Pat Russo, to join him, the SlamJammers and Andy. The music and talent on stage was phenomenal. Grilling? Barbequing? There Is A Difference, But Both Are Delicious

By Karen Lund

Fire up that grill and get those steaks ready. It's the beginning of barbeque season on the North Fork! For the passionate barbeque chef, the first sign of spring is the appearance of charcoal briquettes in the local grocery store. Out comes the grill and apron and on go the

But are we actually barbequing or grilling? Barbequing is the slow cooking of meat at a low temperature for a long time over wood or charcoal. Grilling is usually fast cooking meat, fish, poultry or vegetables over high heat. It really doesn't matter which method we're using as long as the aroma whets our taste buds.

The act of barbequing sometimes feels primal, and it is. Probably the caveman was the first barbeque chef. Fast forward to the founding of our country and we find the Jamestown settlers digging pits to use heat and smoke to roast pigs. In the late 1800s barbequing as we know it started during cattle drives out West. The cattlemen used brisket, which is usually stringy, tough meat unless it's cooked slowly over low heat for about Traditionally, barbeque and grilling look and taste different in the various sections of our country. Chefs in the southeast use pork and a rather thin sauce on the meat as it cooks. In Texas, dry rub, a mix of herbs and seasoning, is applied to beef, while a thick sauce is used on chicken and seafood on the West Coast.

On the North Fork, chefs tend to both barbeque and grill. During a visit to Wayside Market in Southold, owner P.T. Rutigliano gave us some tips on how to create the best barbeque ever. He said that the three elements of a great barbeque include heat, taste and choice. First, a good fire, whether it be from a gas grill, briquettes or wood, needs to provide more-than-adequate heat for short grilling or slow cooking. Good quality meat, such as beef, pork or lamb, or chicken or fish, should be used. Then generous amounts of seasonings should be applied. The seasonings can be in the form of a dry rub, marinade or sauce.

P.T. warns not to overcook your meal. Develop your own way of testing to see if the meat is done. You might want to either poke at the meat with a finger or cut off a small portion. Experience will make you adept at this process. He also suggests using either London broil or prime sirloin when grilling beef, but poultry is also an excellent choice for the grill. Included below is a favorite recipe of P. T.'s for barbe-

Barbeque Glazed Duck

P.T. uses this recipe at Wayside Market when he makes rotisserie ducks. You can also use a grill if it has indirect heat and a thermostat, such as a Weber.

1 cup orange marmalade

1 small jar maraschino cherries

1 half teaspoon mustard powder

1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Dash of cayenne pepper

1 sprig rosemary

1 whole orange

3 cloves peeled garlic

Salt and pepper to taste

1 whole duck (local if possible)

Blend first 5 ingredients in a food processor. Clean duck inside and out and pat dry. Stuff duck with rosemary, whole orange and garlic and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook the duck on a grill with indirect heat (such as a Weber) or on a rotisserie set at 300-325 degrees for about 3 hours Continue to cook until the meat looks like it's drying out and most of the fat has burned off.

Brush the duck with glaze, which will caramelize, every 10 minutes for another half hour. Duck is done when leg moves easily or juices run clear when breast is poked with a

James Beard (1903-1985) was an icon in the world of American cooking. His cookbooks, which he started writing in 1940, are considered culinary classics. He appeared on television's first cooking show in 1946, established a cooking school and was a contributor to Gourmet and Woman's Day magazines. 1 cup vinegar

1 clove garlic, crushed

2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

1 teaspoon dry mustard

1/2 teaspoon Tabasco sauce

1 tablespoon sugar

1/2 cup catsup

1 teaspoon salt

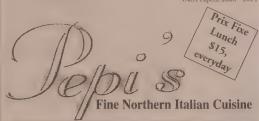

Combine all the ingredients and simmer for 10 minutes. Brush on chicken, spareribs, fish or other meats before grilling.

North Fork Dining: Dan's Papers Critics' Choices

- Aquebogue To Greenport-

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepi's. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience.

Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala Vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smoky. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, prosciutto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-$25. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373.

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef /owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry creme brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Sauvignon Blanc is becoming an increasingly popular (and good) wine on the East End, but I found the 2003 Sauvignon Blanc ($17) from Vineyard 48 to be a little off target. Super tart, it's a bit one dimensional for my taste.

The clear winner among this set of whites is the 2003 Chardonnay ($14). While not as refined as a quality Chablis, that's clearly the goal here. Light, fresh and crisp, it delivers toasty vanilla on the palate. I particularly enjoyed the finish, which is slightly creamy and lingering.

If you're looking for an every day, easy-drinking red to serve with pizza or even burgers, the Vineyard 48 Red ($10) is a nice option. A nonvintage blend of fifty percent Merlot, twenty-five percent Cabernet Franc and twenty-five percent Cabernet Sauvignon, it's soft and filled with berries, sweet oak and even a little cocoa. In fact, I prefer the blend to their 2002 Merlot ($20) which isn't as complex or nuanced as some other 20-dollar Merlots produced on Long Island.

Vineyard 48 plans to craft "new wines from old vines" that display elegance, balance and concentration all while appealing to both everyday wine lovers and connoisseurs alike. The inconsistency found in these first releases doesn't worry me one bit. With the team they've got in place, I expect some delicious, sophisticated wines in the future - starting with the 2004 vintage.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Is there anything new under the sun? The old question's inexplicable specificity stumps me. Is some advertising wisenheimer pushing a re-named (for the third time) tanning lotion on pretty women? You may well ask me: What's new in sun-stroked Hollywood with pretty women? We don't talk about Penelope Cruz getting her tush burned again - this time on Sahara's scorched sands. Or, Sandra Bullock singeing her plucky cheeks with still more klutzy pratfalls in Miss Congeniality 2. Then there's the venerable Nicole Kidman whose brazen cheeks are still red from the embarrassment of her bathtub scene with a 10-year-old boy in Birth. Now, if you were to ask me if there was something new for a film heroine, allow me to inform you of the cinematic role of a 13-yearold Jewish girl from New Jersey portrayed by eight widely different actors. It is devised by the provocative Todd Solondz whose mind plays, Welcome to the Dollhouse, Storytelling and Happiness pricked your mind and stayed there. His new film goes further than that. Steel yourself for the many faceted young girl who is pregnant and unwed and spinning in a wide variety of external appearances. However, what the director is focusing us on is the girl's identity. Not what she appears to be or can be assumed to be, but who and what she is. Yes, even under a hot, bikini patched, sun drenched body - there is a person.

Palindromes, the tricky title of Solondz's daring production, may seem like the high wire artiste adding a glass of water to his 5-chair burden even though he handles it all adroitly. His fun-poking, deadly workings push their way out to the outfields of the avant-garde, a term I don't like to use. Filmmakers who explore different means of storytelling tend to be buried under that tombstone category planted in obscurity. A film like Palindromes doesn't deserve that.

Aviva, the pregnant young Jersey girl, has given herself to the son of her parents' friends. The listlessly depressed girl had no feelings about it, but does want to have the child. Her mother, Ellen Barkin, who seems genuinely concerned for the daughter's future, is adamantly opposed and wants her to abort it. Sensible and caring as it is, her decision sparks an awful consequence as Aviva is just as strong willed. Aviva is enacted in bodily forms as varied as a 6-year-old, an androgynous young man, an obese African-American woman, and Jennifer Jason Leigh and five diversified teenagers. Is your head swimming? Drag it back up on to the beach 'cause here begins the screwiest odyssey since Gulliver.

Aviva hits the road. She leaves her disquieting suburban consequence for the big, wide-open heart of America with a capital A where, it turns out, family values are very dear indeed. Are we mixed up here with Pro-life pros and cons? We might be, but I was too taken with the cascading dramatic events bulging with carnival style juggling: acts of the devout, the lusty, the perverted, the disabled, the crusaders and those who bend over backwards in a dusty wind. Aviva meets a trucker, Earl, who has the sexual appetite of a crocodile. He twists in the wind leaving wafts of charity, love and faith. He's been "saved" so many times he's reeling. "How many times can I be born again?"

Who will save the children? Mama Sunshine and her husband have a houseful of unwanted children and Aviva, now played by Sharon Wilkins, is taken in by them. It is their holy calling and Aviva can find redemption, but what kind? This is a wailing, mournful epic as flawed as a broken crock-pot. See it or put your attention back on Long Island real estate – The Amityville Horror is back!

MAYOR ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This is a terrible film. The two principal actors, Nicole Kidman and Sean Penn, are bad. Director Sydney Pollack, who appears several times in the movie, is bad. And, worst of all, the script is the pits!

The story begins in Matobo (a fictional country) with two men discovering dozens of dead bodies, the result of a genocidal act. The identities of these two men, one white and the other black, are disclosed later on. People are being killed in a war against a terrorist government by two rebel armies that appeared to be terrorists as well.

Silvia (Nicole Kidman) is an interpreter at the United Nations. She was born in Matobo, and Ku is one of the languages that she translates into English. At the U.N., Silvia overhears a cryptic conversation in Ku and reports it to the Secret Service where she meets agent, Tobin (Sean Penn). From that point on we get involved in car chases, a bus bombing, an assassination plot, and lots of soap opera speeches by Silvia on world peace.

There is absolutely no chemistry between Kidman and Penn. Kidman, who was terrific in The Hours, is simply a beautiful woman in this film, giving a humdrum performance, and Penn, who was superb in Mystic River, does not create a character that the audience can respond to. The script needs, and gets, explanations from the characters to be coherent, something that is not normally required in a good script.

All in all, I believe this movie is a complete waste of your time, and most of the critics came to the same conclusion. Moviegoers seemed to get that message. When I saw the flick on a Sunday afternoon, the theater was only 25 percent full. I derived much more pleasure from a Passover dinner with my family the night before. The table was overflowing with good food and the Passover script (all of us participated in the reading) was much better than this movie script.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

theatre review: all shook up...by gordin & christiano

What's love got to do with it? Well, just about everything in the terrifically engaging new musical All Shook Up. Featuring 24 songs made famous by The King, Elvis Presley that is, and with a charmingly silly book by Joe DiPietro (I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change), the evening is a boldly amusing good time. If you have never been in love or never suffered the pangs of unrequited love, you may have trouble enjoying this fresh new musical, but for the rest of us All Shook Up, directed with panache by Christopher Ashley, will be a blissfully

Set in a small town you never heard of, in the Midwest, and encompassing a 24-hour period during the summer of 1955, the musical follows the adventures of a young female mechanic ,Natalie (Jenn Gambatese), who falls hard for Chad (Cheyenne Jackson), a sexy hip-swiveling young hunk. Wearing a leather jacket and carrying his guitar on his back, the motorcycle riding roustabout wheels into town in need of repairs for his bike, but falls in love with a gorgeous blonde, Miss Sandra (Leah Hocking), who runs a portable art gallery. Natalie's widowed father, Jim (Jonathan Hadary), has a secret crush on Miss Sandra as well, but unbeknownst to him Sylvia (Sharon Wilkins), a woman of color and the proprietress of the local bar, has been in love with him since his wife passed away.

The town is run by an up-tight white woman, Mayor Matilda Hyde (Aliz Korey), who fears Chad will turn the place into "Sodom and Gomorrah, but with rhythm." Matilda's son, Dean, falls in love with Sylvia's daughter, Lorraine (Nikki M. James), much to Matilda's consternation, revealing her racial prejudice. Completing the circle of characters consumed with unrequited passion are Dennis (Mark Price), a young student who pines for Natalie, and the local sheriff (John Jellison), who harbors a secret crush on the Mayor.

Chad enlists the aid of Dennis to help him win over Miss Sandra, while Natalie disguises herself as a man, Ed, to gain Chad's attention. Chad ultimately falls in love with Ed, not knowing he is really Natalie, and assumes much to his dismay that he must be gay. The story, which follows the cast of characters in their search for true love, borrows heavily from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, As You Like It, and A Midsummer Night's Dream, while the musical celebrates the spirit of Elvis and reveling in his style. It is never difficult to figure out just who is going to end up with whom, but none of that matters as immensely entertaining songs tumble forth in quick succession.

Cheyenne Jackson, as Chad, is of course the star and delivers a star turn. Mr. Jackson is a seductive charmer with a wonderfully rich voice, who moves beautifully and is funny as well. He is not only a gorgeous hunk with enormous appeal, but he has a warm magnetic presence that grows on you. He receives a tremendous assist from the entire cast of energetic performers, who sing marvelously and perform their respective songs with committed style and enthu-

Jenn Gambatese, who is clearly a star in the making, is an endearing Natalie. Sharon Wilkins possesses a powerful voice with an ability to belt that brought raucous cheers from the audience. Nikki M. James is winning as her outspoken daughter. Alix Korey is a riot as the bigoted mayor, and Curtis Holbrook as her son dances with an explosive sinewy energy that is striking. Mark Price as the nerdy Dennis and John Jellison as the sheriff are impressive as well.

The clever sets by David Rockwell contribute greatly to the evening's sense of whimsy. They are created from colorful flat cartoon-like images, which give the impression of being three dimensional. Best of all is the abandoned roller coaster and the cool way he has come up with to simulate a motorcycle cruising down the highway. The lighting by Donald Holder is vibrant and adds magic to the roller coaster scene at night. The period costumes by David C. Woolard are snappy and colorfully.

The show is a tunefully pulsating, irresistibly infectious, good time that will leave you smiling. We heard the women in back of us saying, "You just don't want it to end." Kind of like grooving. Look for it to run for a long long time.

All Shook Up opened at the Palace Theatre, 1564 Broadway at 47th Street, on March 26th, 2005. For tickets call 212-307-4100 or at the box

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

GRIFFIS AND REGAN AT PAMELA WILLIAMS GALLERY

There couldn't be any more diverse work than is currently at Amagansett's Pamela Williams Gallery: Melora Griffis' portraits of babies and Denise Regan's views of Shelter Island. An initial look, however, does reveal two stark commonalities, namely their painterly quality and their lack of depth. This is by no means a trivial observation; it's apparent from the outset that both artists have command of their individualized technique and style.

If a viewer didn't engage in this first look, the pairing of these two women would seem arbitrary, therefore. Yet somehow their pieces work together, from the intense up-close images of babies to the more distant scenes of figures and Shelter Island.

Now for the differences. Ms. Griffis' infant portraits are disconcerting because babies are almost never painted with distortion unless, perhaps, in a surrealistic work. After all, infants are traditionally revered, especially in a religious context (for example, with the Madonna).

Is Ms. Griffis subverting this tradition with her somewhat disturbing images, where the figures' eyes are not of this world? We are reminded of the child's eyes in the film Rosemary's Baby. Of course, the baby's father was the Devil in that case. Is Ms. Griffis' depiction of the figures' precious and pure white outfits imply their underlying satanic nature? If so, we're not shocked, knowing the duality of human nature.

"Reclining Pink Lady," by Denise Regan

There's also duality at work in Ms. Regan's recent paintings, but its signification is quite different. Her duality is an abstract one involving the obvious comparison between Ms. Regan's pieces and those by Matisse. We can't help but see immediately the similar use of patterns, colors and "flatness."

These commonalities also evoke immediately the idea of derivative art. Was this Ms. Regan's intention? There's an old adage that seems applicable here: If the work is good, then it was "influenced" by the original source. If it's not so good, it's "copying," pure and sim-

We'd opt for the former explanation for one primary reason. First, Ms. Regan's style is basically the same as it has always been. Only her subject matter is different. Her previous figures and scenes from childhood were a good match for her simple technique: content equals form.

While Ms. Regan's subjects have changed to mirror her contemporary life, perhaps due to her move to Shelter Island, her sense of the past remains: its simplicity, festivity and comfort. Thus her "At Anchor" and "Coecles Sand" are sites we can actually visit and become enveloped by. Another piece, however, reminds this critic of England's St. Ives, a small village on the Cornwall coast. Its lush tropical setting may not be the East End, but it goes to prove that Ms. Regan has a flair for the universal.

The current show will be at the Pamela Williams Gallery until May 1.

Honoring the Artist: Rinaldo Skalamera

This week's cover by New Jersey resident Rinaldo Skalamera is a familiar one for East Enders, recalling lazy days contemplating warm weather and sparkling waters. Whenever stress seems to overtake us, we head for the water and perhaps a rowboat ride. Or we simply sit by the banks and think about a more peaceful time.

Despite the familiar, serene setting, however, Mr. Skalamera's painting does not represent a place on the East End. Or for that matter, any place in the United Sates.

It is, in fact, a scene from the Adriatic Sea, a magical region where the artist grew up. What matters most is not the particular venue, however, but the universality of the subject matter and ambience.

"I grew up in Croatia," Mr. Skalamera explains, "a country across from Italy, a rocky land with turquoise, clean water and lots of cliffs. I remember watching the boats come and go; we lived on the coast and did a lot of fishing. The boats were especially important to me. They meant escape, a way to get away, and power."

When Mr. Skalamera was twelve years old, he and his parents moved to America and settled in Queens. The adjustment went well for the young artist, although there were the usual kinds of differences between his native home and Queens. "It was difficult not knowing the language, "Mr. Skalamera admits. "But I learned English in six months. I still spoke my native language at home.

"I also made friends with the Italian children because I could speak Italian. Our neighborhood was mostly filled with people from European countries. School was easy for me, too. I was one year ahead. In other words, I may have been in the sixth grade but I knew things that were being taught in the seventh grade."

Mr. Skalamera also recalls drawing a lot in his classes, saying it "may have only been doodling, but it was in my heart. When I got into high school, I did illustrations and did hand lettering for signs."

As an adult Mr. Skalamera continued to take art seriously, enrolling in New York's Fashion Institute of Technology where he learned how to draw figures; he also went to the Art Students League, where he did landscapes, particularly featuring the Hudson River region.

After years in Bayside, Mr. Skalamera moved to New Jersey. Although he's changed his locale, he still loves to paint boats, as the cover indicates. "To me," Mr. Skalamera says with enthusiasm, "boats are a symbol for peace and tranquility, where people can feel secure. If people have one of my paintings, I hope they can come home from work and get a sense of calm when they look at my work."

AWAY AT SCHOOL... By David Lion RATTINER

Finishing Boston

Finishing the Boston Marathon was a great feeling. Running the Boston Marathon, well, that is a different story.

It starts as I planned to celebrate graduating college. I figured that on Monday I would run the Boston Marathon and then on Saturday I would graduate from college.

After a surprisingly long drive out to the far suburbs of the city and the starting line, myself and thirty thousand other people packed into the street like sardines, and we waited. I noticed all around the road the porto-potties were looking at us like we were crazy, which we were. In the heat, I was already sweating from the stress and tension. Adrenaline pumped through me. We listened to the national anthem on an outdoor radio and watched two jet fighters fly overhead. This was it. The Marathon was about to begin.

I had smeared Vaseline all over my body to prevent chafing. This felt very weird. I had packets of a substance called "gu," a liquid carbohydrate, attached to my shorts with a safety pin. Underneath my shorts, I wore a pair of my girlfriend's spandex tights. Needless to say, they were tight. Underneath the spandex sat a bottle of Advil which I had snuggled comfortably onto my leg. I had my health insurance card, my credit card, and my driver's license in a plastic baggie that I attached to my shorts, also with a safety pin. I figured that if I collapsed and died, these items would help identify the body and help pay for the trip to the hospital and the morgue.

The run started and around mile one, I fell in with my running partner Libby, a forty-five-year-old internal medicine physician in Boston. She had run this marathon before. The two of us trotted along at a ten minute a mile pace.

As far as I could see ahead of us and as far as I could see in back of us, people were bobbing along, marathoning along. Thousands of people, all doing the same stupid thing I was doing. I saw men stopping for bathroom breaks in the woods and I trotted by a roaring crowd of thousands and thousands cheering me on. "COME ON DAVE YOU CAN DO IT!" People would scream. They would know my name because I wrote it with a Sharpie black marker on my white t-shirt. The crowd, for the first six miles at least, really got me excited.

But then, right around mile eight, I started to feel a little tired and it hit me that I had another eighteen miles to go. Instead of stopping, however, I started talking about politics with Libby. After nearly an hour of Bush bashing I was already at the halfway point and so excited that I had met someone who feels about our President the same way I do that I didn't even notice the time go by. You could make the argument that Bush helped me through this part of the marathon. At mile fifteen, I ate four Advils with a swig of Gatorade. "Heartbreak Hill is coming up," Libby said. "This is the hardest part."

I ran by a fallen comrade at mile fifteen, a young guy on his back. Medics ran to help him. His eyes had rolled in the back of his head. I splashed water onto my face and began my ascent up Heartbreak Hill. In front of me, trotting along at a solid pace, two men were attached to one another at the hip with a leash.

The man on the right had a sign on his back that read, "Blind runner, old runner, marathon runner." Libby and I passed him, and both of us said, "You are doing a great job." The man's eyes were completely closed. But he smiled and said "Thank you."

Another fallen casualty on the road happened at mile eighteen, this time an older woman. She began to crawl and yell as I passed her. I didn't know whether or not to help her. She should get some help; someone will help her, I reasoned. I ran by her as a person in the crowd went to her aid. Tears poured uncontrollably down her cheeks. A marathon will do that to you. Libby and I pulled up behind another person with a sign on his back, "Running for my son Michael, 1999-2004." The man refused to look tired as he pressed on ahead of us. By mile twenty, I was behind yet another sign on a man's back. The old man, easily in his seventies, was running with a sign that read, "Cancer 2001, Boston Marathon 2005."

At the top of Heartbreak Hill, I told Libby I needed to walk for a bit. She understood and pressed on without me. I didn't feel any sense of resentment toward her at all. In a marathon, if you can't keep up, you are left behind. At mile twenty I said to myself I would walk for the next five minutes. This ended up being the next forty minutes as nearly two and a half miles went by and my mind started getting a little delirious. But at mile twenty three, I knew it was almost over, and that I needed to start running.

Passing the finish line into Boston as the theme to Rocky blared outside an apartment window was just amazing. I was tired and I was happy to be finished. I sat down in a chair as a volunteer asked me if I was okay and if I wanted some water. "I'm okay, yeah, I'll take some water." I sat in the chair soaking wet, getting a chill from the wind. The Boston Marathon was over and I finished it. It took me five hours and four minutes, but I finished. All that's left now is graduation.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

Easy Dates

Okay, so you all know by now that I'm getting married. My fiancée this, my fiancée that. Yes, I talk about her and my wedding a lot. See. I'm doing it again. But there's a reason. This week, since I have yet to track down this mysterious "Guitar Man" I've been hearing about, I'm going to approach the subject of dating in the city. For obvious reasons, I haven't actually participated in today's singles scene and to be honest, I'm glad, but it doesn't mean the rest of you should be denied.

Summer is coming, and it's never too early to line up some potential mates for the busy season. Why not shoot into Manhattan and flaunt your Hamptons cachet for the men and women who might be visiting come June? You'll have a jump on the competition, or maybe you'll grab someone who normally wouldn't be here to enjoy the American Hotel, Bridgehampton Polo and Georgica — or at least Wolfie's, Acabonic fishing, and Maidstone Park. It seems inevitable that many of those in the urban dating scene will find their way to our shores. If Carrie Bradshaw does the Hamptons, why can't they? So, there it is. The set up. The premise. You are a member of the exclusive East End club. Use it.

We live in the age of Internet dating. It wasn't long ago that the idea of meeting a legitimate partner online was about as far fetched as finding a babysitter on Riker's Island. Today, there's a huge selection of match sites from the ones that synchronize personality profiles to the more specific niche forums for those looking for others with shared interests — dubious or otherwise. I have friends who've done all right on the net. Some are still with their E-found loves. They live together. They talk on the phone. They hold hands. They have real relationships, and the net got them there. This thing's gotten so big that I witnessed an Internet dating convention firsthand while at Club Med in the Turks and Caicos this winter. The crazy kids from J-Date, the Jewish online dating service, frolicked on the beach and partied all night. I think it was a success.

Most of the J-Daters were from New York, but you don't need to go to Manhattan for Internet dating. I guess that's the point. In the city, you want to hit the bars, boogie in the clubs, and lay your rap on the beautiful people. This can, however, pose a problem. New York is two hours away, and during a night out there you might find you only have time to chat up a chosen few. And if dating is anything like I remember it, four plus years ago, you usually end up with losers. It's the cruel fate of the single person. Don't fret. I've found the solution. Well, it's not exactly brand new, but not everyone is hip to the speed-dating phenomenon.

New York Easy Dates, one of the top speed dating services, has devised an "Efficient, effective, and fun" way to meet other New York singles without awkward ice-breaking or getting bogged down in endless conversations with people you'd be running from in less civilized times. Over the course of one evening's event, you participate in at least eight six-minute dates. Basically, you go to a hip lounge or bar and sit at a numbered table with a partner. A bell rings and your six-minute date begins. After the time passes, the bell rings again and you mark down whether or not you're interested on your official form. If you both mark "yes," you've matched. By the end of the night, you've met at least eight people. and the next day you can log on to a web site to discover the people with whom you've clicked. Like any good game, there's a prize the emails of all your matches. Now you can set up real dates for the next time you're in town or they're out east. I've just saved you a lot of drink buying and misguided courting. No need to thank me. Single life is still a minefield, but hopefully, with some good judgment, your summer will be lucky in love.

New York Easy Dates will be hosting two events this week—Thursday, April 28th at 7:30 p.m., Manhattan Bar and Lounge 316 Bowery (at Bleecker) for women 33-43, men 35-48. The theme is single professionals. For younger single professionals (Men 26-36 Women 23-33), Madame X on 94 West Houston will host Sunday, May 1st at 8 p.m. Event price is $35. Check for more info and events.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

More icons. Take the 1964 Ford Mustang. An amazing sales success, it was originally offered with a six or eight cylinder engine. With the V-8, it could do over 120 miles per hour. This was pretty fast by 1964 standards, especially for what was considered an inexpensive car. My only comment here is that I would have felt very uncomfortable rocketing along at 120 in a stock Ford Mustang.

Ford sold over two million Mustangs during the first two years of production, one of the most successful new car launches of all time. This success, having caught the eye of entrepreneur/race driver Carroll Shelby, motivated him to modify the Mustang fastback by adding a heavy duty suspension, brakes and minor tweaks to the 289 cubicinch V-8 engine, bringing the horsepower up to 306 snarling ponies. Thus, the Shelby Mustang was born. It was quite a car and one I certainly felt safe driving at 120 miles per hour. It's amazing what minor adjustments did for the car's handling. However, the car still had shortcomings.

As I have said in other articles, I used to write and produce television ads for Hertz Rent-A-Car, and during the sixties they actually rented Shelby Mustangs. They were called Hertz Shelby Mustangs with large GT350H logos running across the rocker panels. The amazing thing is that these "H" cars were not toned down in any way, but full-fledged, almost race ready, Shelby modified cars. Hertz only rented these cars from their 48th Street garage, just east of Second Avenue. It was a three-story garage with a circular ramp that curved down the three floors to the lower level. One day I was in the garage and noticed that the entire wall of the ramp was scraped all along the left side at what appeared to be bumper height. Out of curiosity, I asked the manager what caused those grooves in the cement wall. He answered that it was all of the Shelby Mustangs hitting the wall as they came down the ramps from the upper floors. You see, Shelbys came equipped with very hard competition brake pads. These were very effective at racing speeds, but when cold before warming up, were almost useless. Those poor cold Shelbys coming down that steep ramp simply could not slow down and ran into the walls.

Initially, I do remember driving the Shelby with one foot on the brake to warm it up when in traffic. Another caveat when driving the Shelby was that it was delivered to Hertz with what was called a Detroit. Locker rear-end. This was a device that locked the differential for better cornering. However, when you took a tight high-speed turn, especially on many of the rough roads in Manhattan, the rear end would lock up and make a hellish noise. Combine this with a stiff suspension, almost as stiff as a Morgan's, and you had one uncomfortable ride. But when the conditions were right, the car was very, very fast, and a most exciting

It is the little triangular window that was in the '66

Shelby that has made a reappearance in the new 2005 Mustang that everyone seems to covet. Think of it: here is a car model that has been in continuous production for over forty years and it more or less looks the same. It also has basically the same design motor and suspension. The only other car I can think of that can make a similar claim is the magnificent Porsche 911 series of motorcars. For the price of a new Porsche 911 you can buy three new Mustangs.

Another important American automotive icon is the Chevrolet Corvette. Originally introduced in 1954, powered by a woefully underpowered modified "blue flame" six cylinder engine and a two speed automatic transmission, the swoopy looking car wasn't much faster than a four door sedan. Chevrolet and Corvette made a quantum leap in performance when they introduced their small block V-8 engine a year later. Almost overnight, the Corvette became a performance machine. I have always liked the looks of the '54 and '55 Corvette because it is small, very unique and has gobs of GM WonderRama concept-car-styling details. In a way it is an American version of a 1954 Porsche Speedster, basic, tightly knit and a little offbeat.

Of course the Corvette improved as the years progressed and so did its overall performance. The current model is the best one yet and it has come a long way from the plastic rattletrap for which some models had a reputation. It has evolved into one of the fastest, high quality American cars, all at a bargain price when compared to other cars in its performance range. Nice work, GM. More about icons next week. By the way, I hope that you have one of these collectibles in your garage.

Treat Your Mother to Something Special

A mom on the move does one or more of the following: looks after children and/or a husband, works a steady job, drives, and shops (and not just for shoes). We all know at least one of these hard-working mom types. She's someone we admire, and we often think to ourselves, "How on earth does she get it all done?"

If your mom is a busy mom, take that into consideration on Mother's Day. Think about what your mom would really enjoy doing, or what she would enjoy not doing. Don't waste your weekly allowance, or even a day's pay on some ridiculously elaborate bouquet of cut flowers and a played-out box of chocolates.

If you are reading this article and you're over the age of 12, you can make your mother breakfast. Don't be shy to seek the help of another adult if you're not able to prepare eggs, pancakes, or even a fruit and yogurt parfait for your deserving mother. If you are over the age of 17 and can operate a vehicle, take her out to breakfast, or make reservations to attend a Mother's Day brunch in your area.

A meal with your mom should only be the beginning of your mother's special day. Take her to a local nursery or tree farm, and have her pick out a small tree or potted plant. If you're in the East Hampton area, head to Cedar Walk Nursery, at 194 Three Mile Harbor Road. Call Mike at 631-324-6138 to inquire about their great selection and landscape services. If you live in Southampton, call Southampton Nursery at 631-283-2431 for an appointment or free estimate. In the Riverhead area, if your mom is fond of Evergreens, call Daniel Ambrosini at 631-727-2928, or stop by their location at 407 Edwards Ave, in Calverton.

If your mother doesn't get out much, you might

arrange to bring plants and small trees into her home or office. When selecting indoor greenery, make sure to find out the proper maintenance (water, temperature, sunlight, etc.). If you think your mother doesn't have the time to care for plants, call Marge Taylor at Plant Parentage, 631-283-4810. Since 1978, Plant Parentage of Southampton has provided services such as design, maintenance, restoration, sales, and even rentals of many tropical indoor plants.

If you are over the age of about 12, there should be no reason why you can't lend a hand with daily tasks like washing the dishes and doing laundry. And this is the time of year when your mother will probably be attempting the bigger cleaning feats of the home, like cleaning floors, carpets and furniture. If you tread the floors of your mother's home, you shouldn't hesitate to lend a hand and wear your mother's gloves. If you've grown up and moved out of your mother's house, you may even be able to spring for a cleaning service. Call Joe at ServiceMaster Clean, 1-877-624-9085, for cleaning and restoration services that tackle things like wood floors, carpets, duct cleaning, and mold treatment. They even provide 24-hour emergency service, if you happen to wait until the last minute.

Now, think about your mom's method of transportation, or as my mom used to call it, "Mom's Taxi Service." Even though it may have been awhile since your mother has had to give you a ride, you've probably contributed to many of the miles on your mother's car over the years. Whether she's driving a mini van or a Mustang, you should want your mother's commute to be as pleasant as possible. Break out your car cleaning kit, and get to work. Start with the interior. Vacuum the rugs, clean the windows, and wipe down the seats and side panels. Pay attention to detail and use Q-Tips on small areas, such as vents. After you get soaked washing the exterior, wax is optional, and should only be attempted if you're over 12, or you have the help of an adult. If you are an adult, then you're probably allowed to take mom's car for a spin, so head for the nearest car wash. You may even stock her car with some sweet smelling air fresheners, or a mellow

These are just a few of the different things you can do to show your mom your appreciation on Mother's Day, no matter what your age or income level. So turn off your cell phone and give your mother your undivided attention on Mother's Day.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The American Hotel, in Sag Harbor, recently hosted a splendid New Zealand wine dinner featuring executive chef Peter Dunlop's deliciously planned menu to pair with the wines. The program began with a wine tasting from Crossroads Winery, a boutique winery in Hawke's Bay, New Zealand. Several whites and reds were sipped and evaluated by a group of local restaurateurs and wine aficionados with an informative discourse by Christy A.. Canterbury, Eastern USA public relations manager for the New Zealand Wine Growers.

Dinner began with a classic Billy-bi, cream of mussel soup, served in demitasse cups with Chef Dunlop's righton-the-mark foam topping and paired refreshingly Crossroads 2003 Chardonnay. New Zealand giant Greenlip mussels, generously dressed with garlic parsley butter, were devoured with sips of a 2004 Sauvignon Blanc Marlborough, of the Southern Islands. Chef Dunlop continued to delight us with a rosy pink rack of lamb main course served with a medley of haricot

The happily satiated diners were delighted with Chef Dunlop's finale – kiwi and crème patisserie tart dressed with gooseberries, blackberries and golden raspberries served with kiwi ice cream. The following recipies are inspired by Chef Dunlop's menu, reprinted and adapted from other published sources.

BILLY-BI

Executive chef Peter Dunlop of the American Hotel recreates this mussel soup classic by taking a small amount of the creamy broth to foam in a cappuccino machine.

Serves 6-8

- 4 pounds cleaned mussels
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 large clove unpeeled garlic, crushed
- 2 onions, coarsely chopped
- 2 large shallots, coarsely chopped
- 3-4 sprigs fresh thyme
- 5-6 flat leaf Italian parsley sprigs
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 1/2 cups dry white wine
- 1 cup half and half
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 egg yolk
- Sea salt and freshly ground white pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, optional

1. Scrub mussels, remove beards, and discard any that are open. Place mussels in a deep kettle or saucepan. Add butter, onions, shallots, thyme, parsley, bay leaves and white wine. Cover pan, bring to the edge of a boil, and steam about 5-8 minutes, shaking and tossing the mussels in the pan to redistribute them. Cook mussels only until they open. Discard any that do not open. Scoop out mussels with slotted spoon and reserve.*

2. Strain the liquid through a cheesecloth-lined strainer pressing down on the seasonings into a medium saucepan and keep warm.

3. Whisk the half and half, cream and egg yolk in a bowl. Stirring constantly, ladle a few tablespoons of the mussel liquid to the cream and egg yolk then return the creamy mixture to the mussel liquid, whisking constantly over medium heat. Do not allow mussel broth to come to the boil or the soup may curdle. Season to taste with sea salt and white pepper. If you have the luxury of a cappuccino machine add a cup or so of liquid to froth and serve it atop servings of Billy-Bi soup. Garnish with parsley, if desired.

*Reserve steamed mussels for the following recipe.

MUSSELS WITH GARLIC AND PARSLEY BUTTER

This familiar seasoned butter is generally used with snails. Here it is adapted to top steamed mussels. Makes 3/4 cup

8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter, cut into 5 pieces

- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
- Freshly ground white pepper to taste
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
- 3 dozen steamed mussels on the half shell.

1. Allow butter to come to room temperature and place in a food processor or whip by hand until light in color and airy. Add lemon juice, salt and pepper, garlic and parsley. Process or whip until the mixture is well blended.

2. When steamed mussels are cool enough to handle, pick them out of their shells, saving one half-shell for each mussel. Pick out any remaining bits of beard from the mussel shells. Spread each mussel evenly with a little of the flavored butter and put them on a baking sheet. They can be done ahead to this point, then covered with plastic wrap and refrigerated.

3. When ready to serve, preheat broiler to its highest setting and broil mussels just until the butter melts and browns lightly, about 1 or 2 minutes.

Chapters, 1996

RAMP AT THE AMERICAN HOTEL

Executive chef Peter Dunlop serves this pungent vegetable, also known as wild leek. According to award winning author Elizabeth Schneider, wild leek flourishes in rich forest soil generally within sugar maple groves, from Canada through New England and as far west as Minnesota. In the southern Appalachians it is called ramp, and its appearance is the cause of spring celebrations throughout the area. Depending on the weather you ought to be able to seek wild leek or ramp in markets from March to June. Choose them when they are firm and springy to the touch, bright green with roots intact and downright dirty, not flabby or yellowing. This is important: if leeks have been pre-trimmed and washed they will lose their fresh flavor. Serves 4-6 as side dish

2 bunches small wild leeks (about 3 dozen) Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Clean vegetables by slipping off the first layer of skin from the bulbs, then trimming off the roots. Remove any yellowing or wilted leaves, then rinse the leeks in several changes of water, swishing them about vigorously.

2. You may cook wild leek in just about any way you would cook cultivated ones. Here Chef Dunlop sautés the vegetable in butter and seasons with salt and pepper and cooks until wilted, less than 1 minute. His simple method produced a delicious vegetable with slight garlicky overtones.

Above introductory material and preparation reprinted from Elizabeth Schneider's Uncommon Fruits and Vegetables, Harper Row, 1986

Dining in the Hamptons Carrots: The Rainbow Root

Carrots are rooted in ancient history. And along their long journey from pre-historic Afghanistan to your dinner plate they have taken many forms and colors. Originally traced to the Middle East 5000 years ago, the ancient carrot was not the glowing orange color that you see today. These carrots were wild carrots, not farmed and cultivated as food, but used for medicinal purposes. They took many shades including white, yellow, green, red, purple, and black. Pretty much every color, except orange.

Archaeologists have documented the use of carrots in ancient Egypt, discovering seeds in pharaohs' tombs that date to 2000 B.C. And further evidence by Egyptologists shows that carrots were planted along with fennel in the eighth century B.C. garden of King Merodach-Baladan.

Fast forward to ancient Greece and Rome where the carrot was a staple. Still thought to have medicinal uses, the carrot (still not orange) was cultivated and harvested by both cultures. And as Roman culture spread, so did the popularity of the carrot. By 100AD the carrot had made its way through Germany and the rest of the continent to Britain. Still not orange, the vegetable remained in Britain after the Romans left, where it was left to grow wild.

There is a gap in the history of carrots for the next several hundred years. Eventually they shows up in North Africa by way of the Middle East. They is documented for the first time in Turkey by the 10th century. The Moors took them with them when they invaded Spain and re-introduced them in Europe in the 12th century, but still there were no orange carrots to be found.

By the 13th century carrots had made their way across Asia into China. Back in the west, consumption throughout Europe was becoming common. Fields were planted, gardens were grown, and the carrot began to take shape as the household vegetable it is known as today.

France embraced this vegetable and by the 16th century the continental varieties had made their way to England, where they became more popular than those left behind by the Romans over a thousand years earlier. Around that time they also began sprouting up in the New World, first documented as being planted in Margarita Island (off the coast of modern day Venezuela) in 1565.

But when did the carrot turn orange??? Well, we'll have to thank the patriotic Dutch for that creation. In the 17th century, the House of Orange was in control of Holland and to honor their crown, Dutch horticulturists crossbred different strands of yellow and red carrots. And so the modern carrot was born (sort of). The Dutch further improved this hybrid and created four distinct varieties of orange carrots: Long Orange, Scarlet Horn, Late Half Long, and Early Half Long — to which all modern carrots can be traced back.

Today, the purple carrot is back in style (although it is still orange on the inside). In 2002 British farmers began introducing the colorful root in an attempt to draw even more attention to the versatile veggie. Not to be outdone by the Brits, American scientist Dr. Pikes has created the Beta Sweet Carrot. It is maroon, with the texture of an apple and a sweeter than the usual taste. What makes these carrots purple and maroon is the same natural ingredient that made the original carrots in Afghanistan purple; anthocyanins, a powerful anti-oxidant. The downside to the colorful carrots is they cost twice as much as regular orange carrots. It's quite odd when you think of it. It took 4700 years to turn carrots orange and only another 300 to turn them back to purple.

Although these carrots are becoming increasingly popular, they may still be very difficult to find, but if you can, why not try out a simple recipe.

Maroon Carrot, Mint and Golden Raisin Salad

Serves 4

- 1 pound maroon carrots, washed not peeled
- 3 tablespoons golden raisins
- 2/3 cup mint leaves, chopped
- 2 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil

Salt and pepper to taste.

Grate carrots into a medium bowl. Combine with raisins, mint, lemon juice, and olive oil. Season with salt and pepper. Toss and serve.

Recipe provided by J&D Produce.

PS. You can also still find yellow and red carrots if you look hard enough. Ask your grocer.

What to eat now

The federal government recently replaced the 13-year-old Food Guide Pyramid with the Food Guidance System. The triangle's make over was long overdue, considering they created it in 1992 to encourage Americans to eat healthy. The new 3-D pyramid displays colorful vertical stripes that run from tip to base of the triangle and represent the five food groups, and healthy fats and oils. There is even an added staircase on the side of the triangle, to make us aware of the daily requirement of physical activity for weight maintenance.

Based on the 2005 U.S. Dietary Guidelines, the pyramid was revamped to stress the importance of consuming fruits and vegetables, whole grains, and healthy fat. The Department of Agriculture, along with international marketing and public relations firm Porter Novelli, has come up with a personalized approach to guide Americans in getting the appropriate amounts of healthy food, and exercise. Mypyramid.gov allows you to explore the interactive pyramid, as it is almost entirely a product of the web. The new Food Guidance System features 12 intake levels, from 1,000 to 3,200 calories per day, to help consumers figure out what their caloric intake should be in order to maintain a healthy weight. The calculations are done after entering your specific sex, age, and activity level.

The orange stripe along the left side of the pyramid represents whole grains, and right of the whole grain category, vegetables are represented in green. Slightly narrower than the green, a red stripe symbolizes the importance of fruits in our daily lives. Just to the right, fats are symbolized with a thin yellow strip. Then comes milk and dairy products in blue and, lastly, the right side of the triangle is purple, which represents meat, beans, fish, and nuts.

Obesity is the biggest health problem facing the country, and that could be in part because the average American puts more than a "serving" on his/her plate. The new triangle gives the serving sizes in cups, teaspoons and ounces, to help us figure out what a serving size actually is.

When going for grains, aim for 6 ounces a day. 1 ounce is a slice of bread, 1 cup of dry cereal, or half a cup of cooked rice or pasta. Try to make at least half of the servings whole-grain products. Whole wheat bread, pasta, and brown rice are good options, and good snacks include popcorn (not the movie theatre kind), and whole-grain baked tortilla chips.

Two and a half cups daily of assorted vegetables are encouraged. When it comes to salads, stick with the dark and leafy, like broccoli and spinach, opt for orange veggies like carrots, and make an effort to get your fill of beans and peas. Veggies are best in the raw or steamed, and can be bought fresh, frozen, or even canned (look for low sodium if they are in a can). You can quickly create colorful salads with vegetables like baby carrots, tomatoes, and shredded cabbage. Prepare and bag veggies ahead of time for smarter snacking.

Make fruit your focus, and get the recommended 2 cups a day either fresh, frozen, canned, or dried. (When canned or dried, watch out for added sugar and syrup.) Keep fruit in eyesight, on your kitchen table or in your refrigerator, and go easy on fruit juice! The fiber you need is found in the actual fruit so don't rely on juice to get your fill.

The yellow strip is smallest, because it represents oils. Try to get your fat from fish, nuts, seeds, and olive and vegetable oil.

Collect your calcium every day with 3 cups of low fat or fat free foods, like milk, cheese and yogurt. Yogurt based dips are great with veggies, and low fat cheeses help enhance the flavor of meals.

Get 5 1/2 ounces a day of meat and beans. Lean choices such as fish, chicken, beans, nuts, and seeds will all provide you with the protein you need, whereas red meat will only contribute unhealthy fat. Baking, broiling, or grilling are best!

The staircase on the pyramid tells us to get moving. Adults are urged to get 30-60 minutes a day to maintain their weight, and up to 90 minutes a day for weight loss. For kids, 60 minutes a day is ideal. Go to Mypyramid.gov to explore the new pyramid and find the balance of exercise and food that's right for you.

A Safer Sun

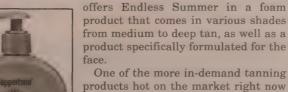

Self-tanning products are becoming more and more popular these days. This sunless tan alternative has resulted in a growing market of selftanning products. And everyone is jumping aboard from Coppertone to Bain de Soleil and Jergens.

The damage that the glaring sun can inflict on our skin is frightening, and protection is vital. Sun damage not only causes SKIN CANCER, but it can add years to your looks. Too much exposure to the sun will dehydrate the skin causing it to dry, crack and peel which will eventually lead to WRIN-KLES

Here are just a few alternatives that will allow you to achieve that bronze glow you are looking > for without exposing your skin to the harsh rays of the sun.

Coppertone offers an Endless Summer Sunless Tanning Gradual Tan Moisturizing Lotion. For an affordable price you can moisturize vour skin as you normally would after the shower and wait to see the results. A friend of mine has quickly become a fan of this product after only a few uses. And it really looks natuproducts hot on the market right now is Jergens Self-Tanning Lotion. This product is currently sold out at many drugstores and seems to be on back order, so next time you see it available, purchase several. Neutrogena makes a fabulous line of self-tanning products as well. All of the above can be found at your local pharmacy/drug store.

Self-tanning products contain dihydroxyacetone. This ingredient is a colorless sugar that stains the skin darker because it chemically works together with dead surface cells in the epidermis. The only concern with self-tanners is skin sensitivity. Like any product you apply to the surface of your skin, you must test it out before you apply it to your entire body. This is very important for those with sensitive skin.

Of course on the higher end there are an array of products by L'oreal, Clinique, Clarins, Dr. Brandt Skincare Bronze and Lancome, just to name a

There are various forms of skin cancer including the most commonly found cancer, Basal Cell Carcinoma, which affects more than 800,000 Americans per year. Did you know that one out of every three diagnosed forms of cancer is skin cance? The obvious cause of this type of cancer is too much sun exposure. Five warning signs listed on The Skin Cancer Foundation website are: 1. an open red sore, 2. a reddish patch, 3. a shiny bump, 4. a pink growth, 5. a scar-like area.

If you have already had many years of fun in the sun, keep an eye on anything that looks abnormal and examine those areas. If you're still worried and something looks suspicious, make an appointment to see your dermotologist.

You only have one body so it's important to take the proper precautions to prevent any health issues. Educate yourself about your health. A few great websites include: www.smarkskincare.com, www.drugstore.com, www.sephora.com and www.skinexpert.com.

And if you insist on worshiping the sun remember the following rules: 1. ALWAYS wear sunscreen, 2. avoid unnecessary sun exposure between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., 3. Wear protective clothing, hats, sunglasses etc., 4. stay away from artificial tanning devices like sunbeds, 5. examine your skin at least every three months.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Revitalized Garden Favorite

Late spring would be lackluster without peonies - one of the favorite garden perennials. There is no more consistent yearly bloomer. I recall that while I was growing up, the family driveway was lined with peonies that flowered every Memorial Day like clockwork.

Peonies flower for about a week in late spring. They can be early-, mid- and late- flowering. As such, the length of the flowering season can be extended to about six weeks if varieties are intermixed. Peonies produce exquisite, large flowers that are frequently fragrant. Flowers come in shades of white, red, orange, yellow, and silver; never in shades of blue.

Peonies take a long time to establish themselves, and are not the easiest of plants. If given time, and planted in full sun, few plants rival the floral display, shiny greenish-to-reddish foliage, and years of dependability.

The garden peony (Paeonia lactiflora) is part of the Paeoniacea family of plants. It is classified by its flower form. There are five types. All types have five or more large outer petals called "guard petals" and a center comprised of stamens or some modification thereof.

The "single" peony has pollen-bearing stamens that are surrounded by a layer of outer petals. "Semi-double" peonies have broad, outer petals interspersed with pollen-bearing stamens, and inner petals. "Double" peonies have dense centers of broad petals that contain modified stamens that are petal-like. An

"anemone" type, usually included with semi-doubles, has several rows of guard petals encircling a center of thin, modified stamens. A "Japanese" type — spectacular — is similar to the anemone type but has staminodes (sterile stamens) in the center.

Some of my favorite cultivars include "President Taft," a fluffy pink double; "President Lincoln," a single deep-red; "Abalone Pearl," a single, flower of coralpink; "Festiva Maxima," a fragrant, double white; "Sarah Bernhardt," a double, medium rose; and "Nick Shaylor," a double pink variety. If you like the Japanese type, look for "Golden Wheel," a light, lemon yellow, and "Nippon Beauty," a lovely red with a red and yellow center.

Peonies require cold weather to activate in spring, so are most suitable for states with cooler winters (Zones 2-8). Plants typically grow from two feet-to-four feet tall and thrive in well-drained soil. While they tolerate a variety of soil types, they flower best in soils that are rich in organic matter and slightly alkaline (a sprinkling of garden lime each spring helps on the East End).

Peonies are best to plant in the fall, but most nurseries on the East End carry peonies in May and June because they flower at this time. If planted before the end of May these potted peonies can do quite well.

Peonies require an area of about two feet in diameter for each plant. To start, select a sunny spot where the plant will remain undisturbed for a decade or more. Dig a hole large enough to accommodate the roots and incorporate some organic matter in the bottom of the hole (peat, composted manure, etc.). We have found that a handful of bone meal helps. Position the plant so the stalks are at ground level. (If you acquire bare-root plants, position them so the small red-colored eyes are about two inches below the soil surface.) Backfill with enriched soil and water the plant well.

It will take several years for peonies to establish themselves. If you purchase bare-root plants, expect three to four years before flowering will occur. Potted plants tend to bloom sooner, though most plants are in shock for the first and second years.

Peonies have few pests or problems. Occasionally, they may get fungal infections such as botrytis blight and leaf blotch that occurs during wet spring weather. Spots appear on leaves, stems soften and decay, and buds may rot or blacken. If you observe these problems, remove the infected parts of the plant immediately and use a fungicide for these fungi. Peonies sometimes also are infected with soil-borne fungi such as Phytophthora and Verticillium. Plants must be destroyed if these infections occur.

Some people are disturbed that peony flowers attract ants. Ants are attracted to the sugary liquid secreted by flower buds, and are not harmful to the plants. They can be easily removed with a piece of paper towel when the flowers are cut for indoor use.

I cannot imagine a more stately or beautiful garden plant. If you have a sunny spot, consider at least one specimen of this great garden perennial.

There's a Lawn Growing on Your House!

At some point during the nineties, environmentalism and political correctness became of the now. Toward the end of the century, perhaps a bit of the good times came back. We ate more meat, told some mean jokes, swilled booze with abandon, and maybe puffed a cigar the size of a baby's arm. Still, lurking on the periphery, the granola-eating hippies and finger wagging tsk-tsk-tskers kept up their morale. Goddess to red-blooded meat eaters abound. Pamela Anderson even posed for PETA, although I suspect her moral character has never been taken very seriously. Ask Tommy Lee. Or watch him - or them, for that matter. So, once again we face a new battle to protect our comfort and sanity in the face of the roaring do-gooders and protectors of the planet. Apparently, our roofs are not Eco-friendly. Yes, you heard me. Someone out there has decided that the thing above our heads that keeps out the rain and the sun and the cold is no longer acceptable. The roof has been around since man discovered shelter, around the same time he discovered food and air, and now it must be altered.

I'm still not exactly clear on why standard roofs aren't good for the environment, but it seems to have something to do with wasted energy, flooding, reduction of oxygen, UV rays and shingles not being an adequate place for insects, birds, and butterflies to create a home. But there is a solution. Like the sod roofs popular in Scandinavia for hundreds of years, green roofs, Eco-roofs, or roof gardens - whatever you want to call them - will make everyone's inner treehugger smile. The Icelandic people used the vegetation covering as a way to insulate and protect their homes due to lack of a better natural resource, but today modern technology combines with ancient wisdom for the best possible application of a garden to the top of your house.

First, a waterproof membrane is applied to the roof, followed by a root barrier and drainage space. To ensure drainage capacity, the support to the waterproofing layer should have a slope of at least one and a half percent. Sometimes a layer of felt is put down as a surface for roots and plants to grab on. Then the growing medium is placed, usually no more than 2 centimeters thick. Finally, the soil is seeded with a variety of simple durable plants like sedums, perennial grasses and typical rock garden plantings. In a short time the roof will be covered with a dense layer of vegetation and will get you pats on the back from every Birkinstock wearer in town.

Benefits range from sensible to ridiculous. One such positive is the 20-30 percent reduction in heating and cooling that coincides with your new roof. A green roof can't get hotter than 77 degrees, while a standard roof can heat up to 140 degrees in the summer. Even a 3-7 degree drop in temperature translates into a 10 percent reduction in air-conditioning requirements, and insulation will improve for the reverse in the winter. Succulent plant varieties absorb water to minimize runoff (and the calming sound of the rain that for me would be sorely missed). One manufacturer of green roof kits claims that the garden will protect against weather hazards like hail, therefore extending the life expectancy of your roof. I never realized hail was such a problem as to give our roofs an early demise. They also cite protection against UV rays, and foot traffic. Noise pollution will drop 8 decibels, for those of us concerned about anything associated with the word pollution, by absorbing rather than reflecting sound, and the plants can cool the surrounding air while producing more of it and keeping it clean. My favorite reason, however, is the happy little habitat roof gardens create for birds, butterflies and other insect friends that we normally struggle to eliminate.

The most notable issues associated with roof gardens are the potential for damage to the house should the waterproof membrane be punctured, pesticide leakage from whatever runoff does occur, considerable costs of upkeep, and - duh! - unwanted wildlife. For me, the real question and major decider is the aesthetic quality. Forget about the environment for a second and consider whether or not having plants on your roof is cool or silly looking. Despite my aversion to giving in to the pleas of faux fur fans, it might be pretty neat to see.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Preparation for the summer season is underway in Real Estate offices all over the entire East End. As the weather warms, it brings buyers, renters and seasonal residents back out east for the next few very busy months. Realtors on the East End find all kinds of creative ways to show and sell their properties. Last season, brokers stepped outside the box trying new and inventive ways to attract high-end clients. Prudential on the North Fork hosted a beach party and an open house at a waterfront listing in East Marion. During the US Open, a national resort developer, WCI, came to the Hamptons and rented a mansion in Southampton to hold events that were intended to attract wealthy golf enthusiasts and professionals. At a local North Fork winery there were wine tasting open houses to promote the sale of a vineyard. There was a 100vear birthday party for the Maycroft Estate that kicked off the release of a book documenting the history of the Quiogue estate. Another broker offered trips to Bermuda as a summer rental incentive. The list goes on and on.

This past weekend the Corcoran Group in Sag Harbor held an exhibit and champagne reception for artist and aerial photographer Mario Novak. Formerly known as Cook Pony Farm, the Corcoran Group has been hosting, and has become known for sponsoring, such events for the past eight years. Their office, says Gioia DiPaolo, Vice President of Operations, gives off a gallery feel and is perfect for such events. Mr. Novak specializes in photography high-end real estate as well as creative landscapes. His work has been featured in magazines such as Architectural Digest, Avenue and Quest.

Ms. DiPaolo says that "The market in Sag

"Georgica," by Mario Novak

Harbor is strong and has made no sign of abating." She went on to say that village prices have risen dramatically in the last year and now match the value once found only in Southampton or East Hampton. A village mission-style oldie, circa 1920s, that sold last August in Sag Harbor for $1.6 million has now, less than a year later, re-entered the market at $3.5 million; literally double. In bordering areas such as North Haven and Shelter Island of property values also continue to escalate.

Most East End brokers use aerial photos to show off their unique, secluded, expansive waterfront listings. An aerial view of shoreline areas like the Montauk oceanfront at Ditch Plains seems to go on forever. Aerial photos show off a property sprawling grandeur, particularly those on larger parcels or ones surrounded or set inside preserved land. Waterfronts of all types seem to show best this way. Expansive estates with multiple buildings are often shown by air to display, at a glance, the proximity to neighboring properties and to the water. Or, they are often used to show the expanse of a landscape or simply the natural beauty of an area that a potential buyer would otherwise only imagine. It can make a real difference, especially to an out-of-town buyer unfamiliar with the area.

The Ashcroft Estate on Little Ram Island, Shelter Island, is a good example of a property that benefits from being seen from the air. It is immediately evident how private it is, and the 125' deep-water dock facing Coelcles Harbor and the surrounding natural setting are clearly visible. Jutting out at the near tip of the little island, the estate offers ultimate seclusion. The 6-bedroom main house has a screening room and gym. It is listed with area brokers at $8.9 million.

In North Haven, on spec will be built a $7.5 million, 5-bedroom, post modern on the very private peninsula facing Peconic Bay. It overlooks the inlet and a white sand beach with a sanctuary surrounding on three sides. The aerial view is also outstanding, with views of all waterways as well as Shelter Island.

SAME OLD SONG Dear Dan,

I read your April 15th issue and could not believe it when I read "The First Million Dollar Summer Rental (Almost)". I am a local and the fourth generation of an East Hampton farm family. Across the street from me are huge homes that are only lived in a few months out of the year. It blows my mind that Marcia Riklis is going to rent her Southampton home for $995,000. I personally can't fathom the need to have twelve bedrooms and twelve and a half bathrooms in only one home. I don't know, maybe it's just me

On Sunday afternoons, my father and I sometimes take a ride around and he always tells me how when he was growing up the Hamptons was just filled with open space. But now we have celebrities like Calvin Klein with a sixty-room castle and new mansions going up on a monthly basis.

Being that I live in the Hamptons and everyone wants to build a huge summer home, I'm afraid it will be utterly impossible to buy a home when I am ready. I better earn millions so I can afford a home in Wainscott or East Hampton.

I have total faith that Marcia Riklis will rent her home for her asking price. Someone will be rich and crazy enough to do it. During the summer season, the Hamptons is a place where celebrities come, traffic is unbearable, and you have to park a mile down the road just to go to the beach. If we keep building up the Hamptons, eventually we might pave over the serenity.

Betty Dankowski Via e-mail

As Yogi Berra said, the place has got so crowded nobody goes there anymore. —DR

GOT IT Dear Dan

I was extremely proud to be interviewed by Josh May in Dan's Papers last week, and thoroughly enjoyed the interview process. I should probably set the record straight on a couple of things before somebody's feelings get hurt and my career simultaneously combusts. At no point did I find Whoopi Goldberg "not so funny." However, picking through every nuance of even howlingly funny stuff can be arduous and painstaking, mostly because it is all so good, but you have to choose. It can be an unfunny process — editing humor. Whoopi, however, was always funny and I don't suppose she needs me to tell you that!

The studio where Billy Joel recorded his first albums in the late 70s and early 80s was called A and R Recording Studios (rather than "ANR." R stands for Ramone, as in Phil Ramone). Although it no longer stands on 52nd Street, it remains one of the great icons in the heritage of New York studios.

A gentle reminder.... Peter Jennings works for ABC, not NBC.

Thanks!

Cynthia Daniels Via e-mail

ANR is tape recorder-ese for A and R. -DR

KEEP YOUR COPY Dear Dan,

I am a member of the Montauk RFC. I read your article in Dan's Papers, and am going to add it to my scrapbook. I have been told that there is an article in the Montauk Pioneer also. Is this a Dan's Papers publication, and if so is the article a different article? Please drop me e-mail and let me know the details.

Thanks for the good publicity. Keep up the good work.

Simon Bromberg Via e-mail

Same story in both papers. –DR

KOKO KORRECTION Dear Dan,

I'm sure the story about Koko made a big splash in the San Francisco papers, but she does not live at the San Francisco Zoo. She lives at the Gorilla Foundation in Woodside.

My husband's daughter, who is a veterinary nurse who has voluntarily worked at the Gorilla Foundation with Koko once a week for the last several years, says the two ladies who filed the lawsuits are disgruntled employees who only worked there for a few months (haven't asked her about the third employee). Koko likes Jill and requested her to be there when Koko had an infected tooth removed last year. Jill has never been asked to disrobe.

The Gorilla Foundation has a website which answers many FAQ's (www.koko..org

What does Koko say?-DR

Police Blotter

"Motor-Pity!!" It appears two outboard motors disappeared from Falcon High Performance, on Sound Avenue in Riverhead. The motors, valued at $56,000, were reported stolen late last week. The case has been turned over to town detectives who are investigating the crime.

Scallop...... Fluke....... Caper? Ceviche...... No..... Seafood Robbery! With the weather warming up and the crowds making their way eastward, the lines are beginning to lengthen. According to East Hampton police reports, a customer of the Seafood Shop, in Wainscott, slipped out without paying for an order of sea scallops and fluke. The bill totaled just under $20 bucks. The accused claimed to have left a crisp "Andrew Jackson" on the counter, rather than waiting with the rest of the pack because the line was sooooo very long. Spied driving off in a gray Nissan by the market's owner, police ran a check on similar vehicles and were able to find the woman. Authorities advised the parties to resolve the issue.

Lucky 32 Draws Over $12,000. A person, unbeknownst to a Riverhead woman, apparently wrote out 32 of the woman's checks in their name and ended up scoring $12,995. All the checks were written in the name of the suspect. Police have not arrested anyone yet as the matter is still under investigation.

Credit You "Give" Yourself Isn't Worth Having.....It seems a Baiting Hollow man was found to be in possession of an American Express card that didn't belong to him. Earlier in the year, said fellow purchased over $1,000 in goods from the Samsonite store in the Tanger Outlet Center, in Riverhead. He was charged with three counts of criminal possession of a forged instrument and petit larceny following his arrest last week.

Got Off Light? According to Riverhead Police reports, a woman and a man allegedly stole $100 worth of merchandise from the ABC Carpet and Home store at the Tanger Outlet Center, in Riverhead. Obviously not a sofa, chair or desk.....it must have been something light.

Looks Like Someone Made Another Someone Angry..... Over on the North Fork, an East Avenue Riverhead resident reported tire tampering. Apparently all four tires on their car had been sliced and diced, causing about $1,000 in damages.

Didn't Run Off By Itself.....Or Did It? According to Riverhead police reports, the safe at Saks Off 5th, in the Tanger Outlet Center, was cracked. Though police are investigating the pilferage, reportedly $1,170 was stolen.

CIA Operative Nabs Bronze Plaque And Attention of Local Law Enforcement. A man claiming to work for the Central Intelligence Agency allegedly stole a bronze plaque designating a home as a landmark in the Cutchogue Historical District. Authorities watched as the man removed the "Old House" plaque from the building. When confronted by police he had in his possession burglary tools along with the bronze marker. He told police that he was working with the CIA on an investigation of the home, which was believed to be involved with witchcraft in Salem......

Tempting Give Away......A car left running at the Texaco station, in Southampton, was driven away by a person other than its owner. Shortly after midnight a Hampton Bays man left his Dodge Avenger running as he ran inside the gas station. Five minutes later, when he returned to the parking lot, his car was nowhere to be found.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpecting motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble ar ellipitical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.
